4 Per Cent Beer? Hardly.
How to Fight Depression.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MRS. JULIA MAUDE LOWTHER, 23 years old, continued chewing gum "methodically," while the jury's verdict condemning her to death in the electric chair was read. She killed Mrs. Clara Smith, 28 years old, mother of two children. Mrs. Smith's husband, whom Mrs. Lowther obliged by killing his wife, is in jail awaiting execution.

MRS. LOWTHER, black-haired, of Indian ancestry, is not especially interested in her coming execution.

The state of Ohio ought to be interested. No woman has ever before been sentenced to death in that state. It seems late in the history of the human race to set the example of killing.

OTHER OHIO news today tells of the crash of a meteor, a heavy mass presumably made of iron and nickel, coming from outside space, to bury itself in the ground on Henry Pohlman's farm, half a mile north of Malinta.

Thousands were awakened by the shock, windows were broken, telephone poles and wires knocked down, small trees thrown over and a field of oats crushed to the ground.

The meteorite, if it was a meteorite, has not yet been excavated.

Those are interesting visitors that strike our atmosphere traveling several miles a second, their outer surface heated red hot by friction, and their speed slowing down as they near the earth.

Some meteorites have been worshiped by pagans, who assumed that an angry god had thrown them, as a message. The famous Black Kaaba stone in Mecca, from which Mohammed rode up to Heaven on his white horse, is now known to be a meteorite.

IN AUSTRALIA and South America, some native tribes, according to an eminent English anthropologist, Sir James George Frazer, have one language for the men, another for the women. In those tribes, young boys speak the language of the women, their fathers speak the men's language.

This practice is attributed to kidnaping, men stealing wives from other tribes, to avoid inbreeding, and the kidnaped wives keeping their own language, while the husbands kept theirs.

In some cases, that might contribute to family peace.

A RUMOR, as false, perhaps, as it is mysterious, says the government has issued a questionnaire, to ascertain public feeling concerning "4 per cent beer."

Brewers are asked to tell how many men 4 per cent beer would employ, at what wages, how much grain they would use if 4 per cent beer were made legal.

THERE IS no doubt that with 4 per cent beer the government's income would be increased by more than a billion, which would take care of the deficit. It is also certain that many that now get drunk on bootleg liquor, or "needled beer" fortified with bad alcohol, would remain sober.

However, prohibition doesn't want 4 per cent beer, and prohibition will rule the administration, at least until after November, 1932.

MERCHANTS OF New York, Chicago, Seattle and elsewhere have proved that the best weapon against depression is intelligent advertising.

Goods are cheaper. Get them, sell them at low prices, let people know you have them, and business will improve.

Mr. Jesse I. Straus, one of the ablest New York merchants, following a very able and energetic advertising campaign based on goods and prices, announces an increase NOW of 42 per cent in the number of sales. And, what is more important, the fact that it became necessary to hire more than 800 additional employes to take care of the demand created by good advertising.

There is little good to have what the people want, unless you let the people know that you have it. Dr. Straus and his two younger brothers, Percy and Herbert, understand that.

THE BRITISH sent a commission to investigate "slave labor in Russian lumber camps. William Leach, labor member of the House of Commons, asks the British government why it doesn't send a commission to investigate slave labor in some southern American lumber camps, "where contractors rent convicts, for $20 a month, or to Sweden, where those that conscientiously object to military service are sent to cut timber." It is easy to see the mote in your Russian neighbor's eye.

"BEHIND GERMANY stands Russia, in a program not of cooperation, but of destruction," is the warning of A. B. Houghton, former ambassador to Germany.

Mr. Houghton warns this country that it must do its share toward the relief of Germany, if other nations remit or suspend reparation payment, since the collapse of Germany would be dangerous to the world.

WAR IS A complicated thing. First, we were told we must send $10,000,000,000 to help the Allies beat Germany. We sent the 10 billions, and 3,000,000 men.

The Allies did beat the Germans, broke them financially. And now we are told to make other sacrifices, to help Germany recover from the beating

Wealthy Men Involved in Slaying; Has Evidence 'To Indict,' Prosecutor Says

By DAVID P. SENTNER.
International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 11.—District Attorney Elvin Edwards today pored over the "love diary" of Starr Faithfull, Greenwich Village beauty and heiress, and announced he had sufficient evidence to ask the grand jury to indict for murder two men who, he charged, beat the girl into unconsciousness and then drowned her.

He made this cryptic statement:

"There were several persons in the life of Starr who would have been happier if she were dead.

"But they were rich men, and no beggar men or thieves."

Miss Faithfull, 25, stepdaughter of Stanley Faithfull, New York and Boston manufacturing chemist, disappeared from her Greenwich Village home, near the residence of Mayor James J. Walker, last Friday. Her body was found washed up on the beach off Long Island Monday.

SOLUTION NEAR

The contents of the feather-bound book with the silver clasps in which the slain girl recorded her innermost thoughts was expected by authorities to solve New York's most vivid murder in a decade.

There are many names in the little book which 25-year-old Starr thought nobody would ever see. Most of those names are of men—for Starr knew many men. How prominent they were is a matter of waiting for 24 hours to pass.

While the district attorney would not go into details about the contents of the diary, it was learned that the notations were colorful, emotional and marked with the pseudo literary style of a girl who wanted to be a writer.

LIVED TOO FAST

Youthful Starr was funny that way. She wanted to live and write. She unfortunately learned to live so fast that she never got down to writing—much. Some manuscripts — half-finished — have been hidden away by her stepfather, and her mother. A Lord Rothermere, British newspaper publisher, visited Mellon's stateroom and was introduced to him.

ABANDON HOPE FOR 18 IN SUB

LONDON, June 11.—(INS.)—The British admiralty today definitely abandoned all hope that any of the 18 members of the crew of the British submarine Poseidon, sunk in collision with a freight steamer off the coast of China, may still be alive. The admiralty said:

"There is no foundation for the report that any member of the Poseidon crew trapped in the vessel may still be alive. The mother ship Hermes has reported to us that the Poseidon does not respond to the divers' tapping."

The Poseidon is lying in between 115 and 120 feet of water beneath the surface of the Yellow Sea, 20 miles off the coast of Weihaiwei, British naval station in China. UNIONS MASS ON 3 BIG MINES

State Troopers Sent Into Washington County Where More Violence Is Feared

While state police and Washington County deputies were preparing to prevent disorder in connection with the proposed demonstration today at Vesta Mine No. 4, near Richeyville, three men were arrested during a march on the No. 1 mine of the W. J. Rainey Company at Fredericktown. A revolver was found on one of the men. The marchers dispersed after the arrest.

The arrests were made, deputy sheriffs said, when the three men refused to heed their order to disperse. Those arrested, Ray Craskin, Manual Paschal and George Pedesto, were charged with disorderly conduct before Justice of the Peace Joseph Crockett. Pascal was armed, according to Deputy Sheriff I. J. Rolfe. Craskin was slightly injured, apparently in a fall, deputies said, before he was arrested.

RESIST ORGANIZERS

The Vesta mine is one of the three largest mines in Washington County and its miners thus far have resisted efforts to have them join the strike which is spreading over Western Pennsylvania. Between 400 and 500 miners, led by scores of women and children, are expected to be in the line of march. The demonstration, it was said by miners, will be followed by a concentrated drive upon the Ellsworth and Marianna mines of the Bethlehem Steel Company.

A spokesman for Vesta mine said no attempt would be made to interfere with the marchers unless they trespassed on company property.

TROOPERS ON GUARD

Reports of this concentration has led Capt. Albert Carlson, of Troop A, Pennsylvania State Police, to establish details of six state troopers each in strategic locations throughout Washington County.

The augmented guard was established by Capt. Carlson following a personal survey of the strike area. At the same time it was announced that a detail of six state troopers from Harrisburg had been assigned to the Greensburg barracks as fears of further outbreaks of violence increased.

The situation at the Kinloch mine, of the Valley Camp Coal Company, where three strikers were shot yesterday by Westmoreland county deputy sheriffs was quiet today. They were shot, it was said, by Deputy Sheriffs Frank Roy and Donald Stewart, when the strikers stoned an automobile bearing strikebreakers to the Kinloch mine.

Family History Wins Army Rank for Bedfast Cadet

NEW YORK, June 11.—(INS.)—Charles H. Bonesteel III, a "distinguished cadet," who has been hovering between life and death for several months, was to receive his diploma and commission from the United States Military Academy at West Point today in St. Luke's Hospital. The commission was granted on the orders of President Hoover.

In making exception to the regulations which require a cadet to be physically fit and present at West Point for his diploma and commission, Mr. Hoover preserved a tradition because Bonesteel's the fourth generation of his family to be graduated from the military academy. In the fall he will go to Oxford on a Rhodes scholarship which he won last autumn.

When Bonesteel, who has been seriously ill since February, was told that he would be graduated with his class, a marked improvement was noticed in his condition. Attending physicians are certain that there is little doubt of his recovery. His parents were to receive the diploma and commission at West Point and bring it back to their son's sick bed.

SCHALL ASKS BRITAIN, FRANCE TO MODIFY WAR CLAIMS

SENATOR URGES RELIEF FOR GERMANY

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The agitation in Europe over suggestions for a revision or moratorium on German reparations found an echo here today with Senator Schall (Rep.), of Minnesota, calling on England and France to modify their war claims against Germany.

Schall suggested the Allies extend the same terms of payment to Germany that the United States has given them on their war debts. He said this plan would require England to forgive her fixed sum of reparations and accept interest payments of 3.7 per cent a year for a period of 62 years. For France he added the settlement would be interest payments at 2.17 per cent a year for the same period, Schall said.

"There has been too much talk that the United States should do something for Europe. Let Europe help herself by helping to put Germany back on her economic feet.

CANCELED LOANS

"We loaned $12,000,000,000 to 12 different nations. We canceled all those loans and accepted interest payments in return, ranging from 3.7 per cent for England down to 1.1 per cent for Italy. We have done all we can do to help Europe. We can't do anything more if we consider the plight of our own people.

"Europe has been telling the German people that we are getting all her reparations. We got nothing out of the war in reality. England got one-third the globe, while France and Italy filled their pockets. All we got was prohibition and yet we're called Uncle Shylock."

PROSPERITY AID LOAN BACKED BY INDUSTRY

Heads of Companies Here Indorse Hearst Proposal For Reviving Business

Captains of industry today fell in line behind William Randolph Hearst's proposal of a $5,000,000,000 government bond issue, to be spent "for the employment of a vast amount of labor at the prevailing rate of prosperity wages," to restore good times.

Indorsing the prosperity loan were A. L. Humphrey, president of the Westinghouse Air Brake Company; Thomas A. Dunn, president of the Chamber of Commerce; William G. Costin, chairman of the board of directors of the Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt president of the United Engineering and Foundry Company, and Dr. A. I. Wise, vice president of the American State Bank and Trust Company.

With Costin proposing the employment of 500 or 600 outstanding engineers and architects to push plans for the work, all five heartily indorsed the proposition.

WOULD REVIVE BUSINESS

Mr. Hearst would have the money spent on construction projects from roads and dams to public buildings.

Humphrey said:

"I don't see how anyone can do anything but pay the highest tribute to Mr. Hearst's proposal. Raising $5,000,000,000 is fine, provided Mr. Hearst and his supporters see that the proper persons handle the work and the proper work is done."

R[illegible]IEF FOR JOBLESS

Dunn said:

"Mr. Hearst's plan for a $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan to be expended for a great program of social reconstruction deserves thoughtful consideration by our government officials. Such a loan at this time would materially help the stabilization of business and restore the confidence of the American people.

"We are the wealthiest nation in the world and it is only proper that we use some of our resources in a constructive way for the relief of the distress which has accompanied this depression."

BACKS LIQUOR STAND

Costin said:

"I think it is a splendid idea. I also am in accord with Mr. Hearst's view on prohibition. I think the return of the legalized sale of liquors would provide enough revenue to pay off the bond issue.

"It is of the utmost importance that the plan be put into effect as quickly as possible. If left to government departments it might take several years to complete plans for all the public projects.

"I think that 500 or 600 outstanding firms of engineers and architects in all parts of the country should be selected to make plans and designs. It is only in this way that the benefits of the loan could be secured quickly."

Ladd said:

"I also heartily approve his stand on the liquor question. I think that the two go hand in hand. If we make it possible for the government to get revenue from the sale of alcoholic beverages it would be possible to pay off the loan within five years without placing an increased tax burden on the people."

WISE'S INDORSEMENT

Dr. A. I. Wise, vice president of the American State Bank, said:

"I think the Hearst prosperity loan would certainly start things moving again. We need a lot of public buildings and roads. It would not be hard to raise the money, or to redeem the bonds later.

"We are forcing the people to make up in taxes what the government should obtain from the sale of liquor.

"Not only that; prohibition has ruined America's basic industry—farming. Farms near Pittsburgh, where rye and corn and barley were once the staples, are in a dilapidated condition. They would be restored and the bonds could be paid with the removal of prohibition."

FESS PREDICTS RE-ELECTION OF HOOVER

Young Republicans' Parley Hears President Lauded As 'Masterful, Heroic'

WASHINGTON, June 11.—(AP.)—A prediction of the renomination and re election of President Hoover was given young Republicans today by Chairman Fess, of the Republican National Committee.

Departing from his prepared speech at the opening of the conference, the Ohio senator said:

"When the American people realize the service of President Hoover he will not only be unanimously renominated but overwhelmingly re-elected."

Senator Fess' declaration was applauded by the conference.

Fess spoke after Postmaster General Brown had praised the President as a party leader and for his "courage, patriotism, patience and wisdom."

The meeting was presided over by Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the national committee, who said the conference had been called for a general discussion of party matters.

Senator Fess asserted that President Hoover had taken "masterful and heroic steps" in the present emergency and added:

"The need of the hour is a leader with a vision to comprehend the problem and the courage to withstand the organized clamor.

"As was recently said: 'We should be thankful that we have at the head of the nation a man who is the embodiment of all that is capable, strong, patient, sympathetic; all that is protective, conservative, purposeful and beneficial.' Such a man is President Hoover."

HEIRESS' DIARY LINKS 2 MEN

similar natural instinct to shield the private thoughts of Starr led her parents to keep the "love-diary" secret until detectives discovered it.

A quiet, pretty girl to her neighbors who saw her browsing among the volumes in those dust-laden bookstalls which abound in Greenwich Village, Starr led a clandestine gin-party life.

Some of her escapades were on the record.

Brought to Bellevue Hospital in March, 1930, suffering from alcoholism. She was found in a hotel with a gray-haired man.

Four years ago, wandered into the hospital claiming she was suffering from loss of memory.

Put off the liner Franconia several weeks ago at Quarantine after the boat sailed. Starr was hysterical and had been drinking.

PARTY BLAMED

Authorities believed that at one of these parties a few days before Starr disappeared was the beginning of the end for the Greenwich Village beauty.

It is believed by the district attorney that the men or man she met on this boat party saw her regularly until her bruised body was found along the beach.

Starr was beaten unconscious before her head was held under shallow water, is the theory. Her body was taken to the beach to indicate suicide, they say.

Her parents and officials point out that she would not have committed suicide because—

She loved life too much.

She had "a date" that Friday night with some men known to her family.

And, as contained in a International News Service dispatch from London, Starr planned to visit England the early part of June.

QUIZ SHIP'S OFFICERS

LONDON, June 11. (INS.)—Scotland Yard took active measures today to aid in solving the mysterious slaying of Miss Starr Faithfull as preparations were made to question officers of the Cunard liner Franconia, from which the murdered girl was put off in the outer harbor of New York shortly after the vessel sailed for England on May 29.

Among those to be questioned was Dr. G. Jameson Carr, the Franconia's physician, who it was thought might be able to confirm reports the girl had been seen in an intoxicated and hysterical condition aboard the ship a little [illegible] before she was placed ano[illegible] in the harbor and sent back [illegible] York.

RUM IN AUTO, DRIVER FLEES

During the chase the driver threw two cases of whisky from the machine into the street. The agents, while on patrol duty, observed the cases being placed in the machine in the Hill district and followed.

After discussing their testimony, the witnesses were dismissed with instructions to return Tuesday morning, when, according to present plans, the investigation will be started.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park and Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk were expected to return from Canada today or tomorrow. They left last week for Buckhorn Lake, near Peterboro, Ont., where they have been studying data in the Main & Co. audit report in preparation for the presentation of their case.

LONDON, June 11.—(INS.)—Climaxing a friendship of many years' standing, a marriage license was obtained here today by Anthony Drexel Biddle, Jr., member of the wealthy and prominent Philadelphia family, and Mrs. Margaret Schulze, daughter of the late William Boyce Thompson, of Yonkers, N. Y.

Biddle was divorced from his first wife, the former Mary L. Duke, at Newburgh, N. Y., last March. At that time it was reported he would be married to Mrs. Schulze as soon as her divorce from Theodore Schulze became final.

Dr. Butler Demands New World Leaders

PARIS, June 11.—(AP.)—A new set of world leaders, more interested in leading the people out of the present economic and social crisis than in "keeping their seats like jockeys," was demanded today by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, in a speech before the American Club.

Efforts to alleviate the world's troubles so far have been childish, he asserted, and of a nature calculated to cause Soviet Russia some amusement.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—(AP.)—The Marines have carried golf into the heart of the Nicaraguan insurgent country.

The tranformation of an abandoned flying field into a golf course at Esteli in the northern wilds was reported to Col. Douglas C. McDougal, director of operations and training.

Held as suspects in the holdup last fall of Yee Dick, a Chinese laundryman, of 618 Taylor avenue, Stella Sadler, 26, of Smithfield, Pa., and Loyal Sadler, "no home," faced arraignment in the North Side Police Court today.

Dick was robbed of $50 by a man and woman, who beat him with a blackjack in his laundry. On Decoration Day, Dick saw the girl who participated in the holdup in Arch street. He grabbed her, but she broke away, police said. The description furnished by the laundryman after the Arch street incident resulted in the arrest of the couple in a rooming house in the neighborhood last night.

Mrs. Marie Hasley, 48, of 605 Sandusky street, leader and minister of the North Side Spiritualist Church, 412 Federal street, successfully appealed to County Court from a fine of $5 and costs imposed by Police Magistrate Thomas D. Jones upon a charge of violating a city ordinance.

Judge D. Paulson Foster, after a hearing, ordered the fine and costs remitted, upon an appeal filed by Attorney William D. Hilldorfer. Mrs. Hasley was arrested May 24 by Patrolman Claude Polichetti. She in turn charged him with aggravated assault and battery, alleging he handled her roughly, and Alderman Headley held him for action of the grand jury after a hearing May 27.

Assistant City Solicitor William M. Randolph told Judge Foster there was no evidence, in his opinion, to prosecute the charge against Mrs. Hasley. Attorney Hilldorfer declared Mrs. Hasley has borne the highest reputation for many years.

Coolidge Urges Regular Procedure in Job Filling

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 11.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

A long standing problem sometimes growing into the proportions of a dispute between the President and the Senate exists over the making of appointments. Individual senators, representatives and other public officers and members of political committees often claim the right to make a choice of whom the President shall appoint.

Mr. Coolidge

No President is likely to have sufficient knowledge of conditions and persons so that he can make the thousands of appointments required without the help and advice of others. Naturally he asks senators and representatives to help about selections in their states and districts. But there are other sources of information and the responsibility for nominating is with the President. Any mistake will be charged to him.

The correct procedure is to observe the Constitution, the law, and the facts. The appointing power is in the President. The confirming power is in the Senate. Let him consult the senators in the usual way about proposed appointments and little difficulty will arise. No President can surrender the all-important appointing power. No senator or representative wants to be ignored. Like many other seeming difficulties it will be resolved by everybody patiently doing what the Constitution directs.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

PLANE BETTERS LINDBERGH'S SPEED

Five Landings En Route Lengthen Actual Time of Trip to Seventeen Hours

After having breakfast at dawn in Los Angeles, three Pittsburghers boarded a Lockheed Orion low-winged monoplane yesterday and arrived in Pittsburgh in time to have a belated midnight snack early today.

Leaving Los Angeles at dawn, or shortly after 8 o'clock Pittsburgh time, Pilot Harry (Skippy) Taylor brought the ship to a landing at Bettis Field at 2:05 this morning. The three Pittsburgh passengers on the trip, the first of its kind to be completed, were C. W. Forcier, manager of the City-County Municipal Airport; J. S. McGill, contractor, and W. R. Yahner, advertising man and former local newspaperman.

14 HOURS' FLYING

The actual flying time for the 2,285 miles was 14 hours 8 minutes. The elapsed time, which included five stops for refueling and weather reports, was 17 hours 45 minutes. Stops were made at Kingman, Ariz.; Albuquerque, N. M.; Oklahoma City, St. Louis and Columbus.

The plane, a Lockheed-Orion, with retractable landing gear, is one of three to be purchased by the New York and Western Air Lines, Inc., to be used on the schedule route of the Pittsburgh Airways Corporation between Pittsburgh and New York. It has a top speed of 215 miles per hour and a cruising speed of 175 miles per hour. The average speed for the entire trip from Los Angeles to Pittsburgh was 170 miles per hour.

OVERTAKE TRAIN

When the plane was only three hours and 10 minutes out of Los Angeles, it passed a Santa Fe train that had left for the east 14 hours before, Yahner reported. Passengers declared that the trip had been "perfectly delightful and wholly comfortable." Doughnuts smuggled aboard furnished a second breakfast for one of the passengers, and after a five-hour nap en route, he declared that he was ready to make a return trip today if such a procedure seemed to be necessary.

"It was a great trip—I'm tired."

Yahner declared that the trip was not an attempt at a record, but that if they continued on to New York at their average speed, they would have bettered Lindbergh's record.

Man Arrested Over False Fire Alarm

Joseph Eichler, 51, of 847 Spring Garden avenue, was taken into custody this morning by North Side police, accused of having sent in a false alarm last night. Police say that he was found loitering in Spring Garden avenue near Chestnut street, near where a fire alarm box had been sounded.

Hard-Working 'Dumb-Bell,' Diva Calls Self

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK

LOS ANGELES, June 11.—(AP.)—Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink "may be just a dumbbell" but is a "hard-working woman," according to her own testimony on record in a civil action here today.

The case was a combination of two suits filed by the singer and her son, Ferdinand, seeking to collect $86,000 from Edwin Carewe, motion picture producer, for an alleged breach of contract involving a film featuring the prima donna and the son. Carewe claimed making the picture was contingent on certain financial arrangements.

When the interrogation turned to dates, the madame's memory failed her. Wearying at the flow of questions, she turned with a stately dignity to the judge, asked and won permission to speak, and then asserted:

"I am a hard-working woman. Maybe I am a famous woman, but I earned every cent I ever made in my life. This contract ruined my whole season at the Metropolitan Opera House and my concert work. How can I remember dates? I do everything myself. I have no secretary, no maids like lots of people. I may be just a dumb-bell, but I can't help it."

VATICAN, DUCE SETTLEMENT IN SIGHT

Recession of Both Sides On Demands in Dispute Brings Peace Nearer

ROME, June 11.—(AP.)—Recession of the Vatican and the government from their somewhat uncompromising attitudes of last week appeared today to have brought the settlement of their dispute within sight.

Pope Pius XI is understood to be willing to accept the state's regrets over attacks on Catholic property instead of a formal apology and the government is believed likely to agree to the reopening of Catholic youth clubs in some form.

This may prove to be under the name of "confraternities" or similar organizations which might later take on many features of the dissolved groups. Such a move would be hastened by the Vatican's willingness to "purify" the clubs by the elimination of certain leaders whose political activities the government criticizes.

The state's efforts to aid the settlement were seen in the arrest yesterday of three persons charged with sacking the Priverno chancery—one of the incidents which the Vatican protested in its recent notes.

The danger of a diplomatic rupture or denunciation of the Lateran treaty and concordat is now believed to be extremely remote. The speed with which the negotiations have been going forward has surprised diplomatic circles, which had regarded the breach as difficult to mend.

Virtual Ban on Church Voted In Vera Cruz

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, June 11.—(AP.)—Virtual elimination of the Catholic Church in the state of Vera Cruz was foreshadowed today in a bill passed by the Legislature to limit the number of priests to one for every 100,000 inhabitants.

The effect of the measure, the most drastic anti-religious legislation enacted in Mexico since the church-state conflict was settled two years ago, is to leave the city of Vera Cruz with only one priest and the state with less than 10.

NAUTILUS CUTS SPEED AS SEA SWEEPS DECK

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS

By Radio Via American News Corporation and Radio Marine Corporation.

ABOARD SUBMARINE NAUTILUS, at Sea, June 11.—With a headwind and running sea, and one engine stopped for six hours, the Nautilus logged 200 miles in 24 hours.

The previous 24 hours, we had made 250 miles. Our position as this is being radioed to our shore contact station is approximately 1,350 miles off Boston.

Our course is set for the Scilly Isles, off Land's End, England, where Capt. Errol Boyd and Lieut. Harry Connor landed in the airplane Columbia last year on their trans-Atlantic flight, and we have decided definitely to call in at London.*

WAVES SWEEP DECK

The starboard engine was stopped when a heavy sea, accompanied by a swell, made speed inadvisable.

Without a flared bow as one sees on most ships, there is nothing to lift the bow of the Nautilus when she meets a sea, and heavy waves have swept the decks.

Fortunately, we had a ventilator open, and the engines, gulping air, drew it through the eight-inch ventilator with such force it sounded like a steam whistle.

Had the ventilator not been open, the engines would soon have exhausted all the air in the boat and created a vacuum that might have been dangerous to the eardrums of the crew below.

TOSSED BY SEA

The seas are now a little to the bow, and this rolls us more than we have rolled before. Sometimes we go over to a 35-degree angle, but the Nautilus is safe at more than 45 degrees.

Yesterday the White Star liner Brittanic swung abruptly off her course to greet us. Her passengers lined the deck to stare as they went by.

We are now beyond the warm Gulf Stream, and have really entered the cold gray waters of the Atlantic.

Wife, on Liner, Frets For Wilkins' Comfort

NEW YORK, June 11.—(Universal.)—Lady Suzanne Wilkins today was Europe-bound on the Mauretania, prepared to go to the rescue, if need be, of her husband, Sir Hubert, and his submarine, Nautilus, now in mid-Atlantic.

Should any emergency arise and the Nautilus be compelled to call for aid, Lady Wilkins said last night before sailing she would not hesitate to ask the Cunard line to turn the Mauretania from her course. She added:

"It is not so much the boat itself that causes me to fret. It is the fact that Sir Hubert is confined in such cramped quarters, when I know he is so restive. He is like a bird. He is used to soaring far and wide, unfettered, in the air. He revels in that sort of adventure. I never worry when he has his wings spread, he's in his natural element then."

Dynamite Explodes In Mine, One Killed

automobile said to have contained strikebreakers was frustrated by deputies who hurled tear gas bombs into the crowd. Two stones were hurled at the passing machine, shattering two windows.

Charges of felonious assault and battery were preferred against the two deputies by Martin Savo and Walter Yaoish, two of the three wounded miners, and they were held for court. The third victim was Andrew Janus. The deputies face additional charges of pointing fire arms and inciting to riot made by Roy Shank and Mrs. Ethel Smith, who said the deputies threatened to shoot them if they did not move on immediately.

TWIN BABIES HURT

Tear gas bombs hurled into the crowd of strikers in the earlier attack sent Irene and Elizabeth Konciezny, 2, twins, of New Kensington, to the Citizens General Hospital for treatment. They were being taken past the scene at the time of the outbreak by their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Sharp, of Meyran avenue, Oakland.

A picket of 75 strikers was established at the Kinloch mine today, but they were not molested by guards. The pickets raised an American flag across the Greensburg highway and placed a sign warning passersby of the strike. The sign read "Strike—Go slow."

Except for continuation of picketing and a few minor assemblies of miners, the situation throughout the entire strike area today was generally quiet.

In a statement issued last night, Vincent Kemenovich, secretary of the district rank and file committee of the National Miners Union, said that Gov. Pinchot would be asked to make his investigation of conditions in the Western Pennsylvania strike area public.

INJUNCTION HEARING

Hearing on the application of the Butler Consolidated Coal Company for an injunction requested in an amended petition filed before Judge Samuel H. Gardner was set for Monday. The petition was filed by Attorney Dan T. R. Dickson and named Vincent Kemenovich individually, and as secretary of the National Miners' Union as defendant. The bill avers that operation of the Wildwood mine has been hampered by pickets and threats of violence to workmen.

TROOPERS PROTESTED

A formal protest was sent to Gov. Pinchot today condemning increased wages, eight-hour day, his action in sending additional state policemen into the strike area. The protest, made jointly by the National Miners Union and the Pennsylvania district rank and file strike committee, said Gov. Pinchot had sent 50 state troopers into the territory. Dispatches from Harrisburg indicated there were six.

At the same time, letters were sent to the coal operators of the strike region setting forth the National Miners Union's demands.

Kinloch people, ordered from the path of shotgun slugs by deputies during the mine strike disorders at Kinloch mine, who today are preferring charges of pointing firearms and inciting to riot against the deputies. Billy, young and weak of heart, suffered shock.

Increased wages, eight-hour day, recognition of the National Miners Union and union checkweighmen were included among the demands. Operators term the demands as "outrageous" and impossible to meet.

An independent mine opened two weeks ago by Joseph Robb, at Bulger, near Burgettstown, was closed this morning when the miners voted to strike pending a meeting today. The mine normally employs 125 men and had been closed four years.

THEFT SUSPECT MARCHED TO POLICE CELL

Pair Walks Trapped Intruder Mile and Half to Jail At Point of Shotgun

Capturing an alleged burglar as he attempted to enter their home, Nick Klasick, 35, and Mike Zuzik, 32, of 93 First street, North Versailles Township, early today bound the suspect's hands behind his back and at the point of a shotgun marched him more than half a mile to the East Pittsburgh Police Station.

Klasick was awakened by the barking of a dog and detected a man climbing onto a front porch. Obtaining his shotgun, he went to the first floor. When he heard the prowler fumbling at the door, he swung it open and greeted the alleged burglar with the shotgun.

The prisoner told police he was Joseph Campbell, 34, no home.

EDISON URGES COURAGE

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 11.—(AP.)—Thomas A. Edison, speaking in a two-way broadcast from his winter home in Fort Myers, Fla., told the convention of the National Electric Light Association here today to stand "courageous" in the fact of the business depression. Edison said:

"I appreciate your greeting. My message to you is, be courageous. I have lived a long time. I have seen history repeat itself again and again. I have seen many depressions in business. Always America has come out stronger and more prosperous. Be as brave as your fathers before you. Have faith. Go forward."

The program was broadcast over a nation-wide hookup.

HOME OF OHIO MINER BOMBED

STEUBENVILLE, O., June 11.—The home of H. G. Malin, a miner employed by the Hanna Coal Company, Dillonvale, O., was wrecked by a bomb early today. Malin and his wife escaped with slight injuries.

Malin told Sheriff William Yost that he and other men who had refused to join the strike of the newly-organized National Miners' Union in Eastern Ohio, had been threatened.

The bombing is the first serious outbreak in Jefferson County strike, which centered about Hanna Company mines at Pine Fork and Dillonvale.

Socialists Blame Chaos on Operators

The Socialist Party of Pennsylvania, through Sarah Limbach, executive secretary of its state committee, issued a statement today declaring that the "open anarchy now existing in the coal fields is but a reflection of the anarchy of competition among the operators that has passed without particular notice of public opinion for years."

Weather Conditions.

There was very little eastward drift of the pressure units during the last 24 hours. The high over the Ohio Valley states increased somewhat further in pressure and the western low appears to be filling up, but it is still producing showers and thunderstorms over most of the states from the Mississippi River to the Rocky Mountains. The rainfall was light except in some localities. The rain continued over the Middle Atlantic and the New England coast and over the Canadian Northwest. Temperature changes were not important, but over the eastern half of the country they were towards rising.

COUNTY'S FIRST VOTE MACHINE EXHIBITED

Courthouse Demonstration Follows Trip Delayed by Accident in Mountains

It arrived last night after a two-day trip from Baltimore that entailed a stopover in the mountains and a return to Baltimore for a fresh start after a truck hauling it figured in an accident.

The machine and others are delivered as a demonstrator. It is the first nine-party 50-candidate machine built in its entirety in the Poole Engineering and Machine Company plant at Baltimore.

Officials of the company say now that their plant is in shape for quantity production and that of completed machines have been made, that the entire group of machines will probably be delivered before August 15. This is the delivery date specified in the contract with the county.

DEATH WITNESS THREATENED

LOS ANGELES, June 11.—(AP.)—Mrs. Ethel Hamlin, club woman and witness in the case against David Clark, former deputy district attorney charged with the murder of Charles H. Crawford, politician, and Herbert Spencer, an associate, was under guard today after additional threats against her had been reported.

Found wandering in a dazed, hysterical state late last night by police in a patrol car, Mrs. Hamlin said a man approached her near her home, showed her a badge and told her she was wanted at the district attorney's office for further questioning.

The man drove her about town, she said, urging her to sign a paper, threatening her with violence and finally promising to "take care of you" if she would leave Los Angeles until after the trial of Clark. Refusing his requests, she said she was thrust from the car while it was moving.

FRANCE TO AID STEAMER LINE

PARIS, June 11.—(AP.)—Premier Laval planned to present in the Chamber of Deputies today a measure for financial relief of the French Line, operating a fleet of trans-Atlantic steamers, in which the company is described as unable to meet its obligations to the state or to complete a $24,000,000 new express liner on which construction has been started.

The government bill is expected to propose an increase in the company's postal subsidy and a moratorium on repayment of government advances totaling about $1,400,000 a year. These measures would be declared temporary, subject to revision when the economic crisis is over.

The emergency was considered serious enough to warrant calling a special meeting of the chamber's finance committee last night, at which the line's difficulties were explained.

Mrs. Walker Plans To Lose 40 Pounds

NEW YORK, June 11.—(AP.)—Mrs. James J. Walker, wife of the mayor, proposes to reduce 40 pounds by dieting and to bring her weight down to 100, what it was when she was married.

that we helped the Allies administer.

GERMAN CENSORS of moving pictures propose to prevent "triangle" stories by cutting out the wicked angle which enters married life to separate the other two angles.

That will make life hard for scenario writers.

Cutting out the wicked angle from the triangle will not, unfortunately, diminish the number of such triangles. They have existed ever since the snake appeared in the Garden of Eden.

IN FACT there was in Eden a real triangular lady named Lilith, eliminated from our Bible. Old rabinical literature teaches that Lilith was the first wife of Adam, but got tired of him and became a demon. She was a lovely woman from sunrise to sunset and a snake the rest of the time.

In time, of course, the wicked triangles will disappear. But it will take about 1,000,000 years for that.

STALIN COPYCATTING his capitalistic brother, Andrew W. Mellon, will borrow $800,000,000. He probably will be less fortunate than Secretary Mellon, who had more than 6,000 million dollars offered him when he asked for only 800 millions.

It will interest American workers to know that Russia is not borrowing 800 millions to make up a deficit. Russia borrows "to complete 518 new factories, finish 1,040 tractor stations and fulfill the five-year plan."

All that means work and wages.

FINLAND, TUCKED away to the northwest corner of Russia, like a fly on the hip of a horse, defies the big nation, actually proposing to compete with Russia in the world's lumber market.

The Finns, possessing an intelligence lacking in many Americans, know that any attack by Russia would be an airplane and gas attack, and, according to H. R. Knickerbocker, the city of Helsingfors is building houses proof against gas, saying that they know that "an airplane raid would wipe out Finland's capital city."

It would do the same for New York, Chicago, Washington and San Francisco, but our distinguished government does not seem to realize it, and goes on building popgun coast-defense guns, as though airmen could be expected to fly down and say "Please shoot me."

Now! The Ships of The Air Bring Fish For You!

Tomorrow—Donahoe's Begin Their Epoch-Making Airplane Express Delivery—Lake Erie to Pittsburgh—

FISH

3 hours from the water to you!

Beginning tomorrow, "Fresh Fish" will have a new and different meaning in Pittsburgh. Tomorrow, fish swimming in Lake Erie at eight o'clock in the morning, three short hours later will find themselves in Donahoe's Fifth Avenue Store—ready for you to make your selection.

Remember how good those fish dinners tasted at "the shore"! There's no magic, no exceptional cooking skill about it—just this simple thing: FRESHNESS. Fish sold in inland cities like Pittsburgh usually are several days old, and they've lost that extra bit of flavor real freshness brings.

Donahoe's "flying fish" will make history in the fish business—not only in Pittsburgh but also in many other inland cities. Once you taste the deliciousness of fish just three hours out of the water, you'll always insist on fish like these, fish that are REALLY fresh!

In the photo above you see the two ships of the air that will bring fish from Lake Erie for you. Here you see the planes poised for the take-off at the Alameda-Butler Airport. Promptly at 6 A. M. Friday their mighty motors will send them winging through the skies—at 7:30 A. M. they'll alight at Lake Erie.

The fishing fleet puts out at 5 A. M. and usually stays out until 9:30 A. M.—but the boat with the Donahoe catch will come in and have the fish ready for our airplanes at 8:30 Friday morning. Returning, the planes will land at Bettis Field, where the fish will be transferred to a waiting special delivery truck and rushed to Donahoe's Fifth Avenue Store.

When you come to the Fifth Avenue store at 11 A. M. Friday, you'll find fish of real freshness, fish fresher than any ever sold in Pittsburgh before, fish three hours out of the water, fish whirled through cool morning skies to provide for you a most tempting fish dinner.

MRS. NIXON :-: Former 'Miss St. Louis' Had Secret Fears

Describes Fate Of French Beauties

This is the fifteenth installment of her own story by Mrs. Charlotte Nixon-Nirdlinger, recently acquitted in Nice, France, of the murder of her wealthy husband after a sensational trial.

In previous chapters she told of her marriage to Mr. Nixon-Nirdlinger, after a whirlwind courtship, their subsequent divorce and remarriage, the numerous quarrels that led to his disappearance, the automobile accident that changed his character and the renewal of quarrels upon their last trans-Atlantic trip together to Europe.

Today Charlotte not only continues the story of their last quarrel, but gives a little picture of the careers of famous Paris beauty prize winners.

By CHARLOTTE NIXON-NIRDLINGER

(Copyright, 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

NICE

During the past few months before the tragedy in our villa Fred's jealousies constantly drove me into a panic of fear. At first I was not inclined to take his threats seriously. I felt he was being simply unreasonable. One of my greatest fantalizations always was to be told I couldn't do something—that if I did I would be deprived of a dress or some other necessity.

Fred continually put up the threat of depriving me of his money. Money can be very helpful, but I never cared to be a slave to it. Besides I was not staying with him because of his money. I endured it all for my children. For their sake I couldn't bring myself to break up our home, and even now my greatest sorrow is for them.

But it was difficult to have to obey every insane whim, whether it was right or wrong, to be tormented and have every bit of individualism taken from me, with a threat always over me that if I didn't do these things I would suffer. Life couldn't be more miserable when added to this condition, was an insane imagination that suspected every move I made, that broke my heart into bits and through physical violence created a fear in me that words cannot describe.

Good Wife

At all times I tried to be a good wife and mother. I already have told of my devoted love for my children. There is Junior, who is a very intelligent child, quick and very sweet. Charlotte is as cute as can be. I believe she will be a lot like Junior when a little older. Both have beautiful blond curly hair with blue eyes. I couldn't have more adorable children if they were made to order.

I liked good shows and dances, but not every night, and I liked to get up reasonably early so I could look after my household and babies. I also liked to study languages and to play bridge—but not at those parties where everybody spreads scandal. I like honesty and simplicity and abhor hypocrisy and snobbishness.

But against this was my husband, who was jealous of all men and indecently jealous.

Yet he would say to me, as I mentioned in a previous chapter, that he ought to have known no good could come from a marriage with a beauty prize winner. I already have mentioned some beauties who are happy and contented, living a quiet, unobstrusive domestic life. But Fred was always ready to point out other less fortunate cases. Indeed it is remarkable how much bad luck seems to have pursued the Paris beauty queens.

Only a little while back Viviana Ortmans, who was named "Miss Paris" for 1931, had her title taken away from her because she was a mother and not a native of the city—so the judges said. From then on she had bad luck.

Sent to Jail

Before her was Mlle. Yvonne Taponnier, who reigned undisputed all last year as "Miss Paris of 1930," but who later was sent to jail. Until she was crowned queen, this brunette was a dressmaker, content with her job and her romance with young Armand Grof, a garage mechanic. Both were about to be married when Yvonne won the coveted beauty prize.

At once she became the toast of Paris and mixed with wealthy admirers. She was invited to make a tour of France, attended by mannequins for several leading couturiers. She was given a grand ovation at the Casino in Biarritz last fall. After all this Yvonne decided to return to her lover of humbler days. But she learned he already was engaged to someone else, for he felt that she had forgotten him in the midst of her long triumphs and was returning to him simply because she was a past number.

Yvonne then demanded money she had given Armand and he refused, according to the story told here when upon the beauty is said to have blinded him with pepper and stabbed him in the arm with a pair of shears. She was arrested and was placed in jail for trial, while her former former lover was in a hospital recovering his eyesight.

Rich Man Slain

Then there was "Miss Paris of 1929," who came to the end of her years reign and reckoned up what she had gained by it. She found she had achieved very little indeed. So she turned around and sued the judges who had elected her beauty queen, charging that they had wasted her time and appropriated all the profits.

Before her, Mlle. Georgette Hodot, who was voted "Miss Paris of 1928," was sentenced to 20 years at hard labor for murdering a wealthy diamond merchant who had revolted at paying more tribute to his "sovereign." Mlle. Hodot was a mannequin and about the time she won the beauty prize she also won the friendship and affections of Isaac Eichisky, diamond dealer.

After she became a beauty queen she mingled with celebrities and paid little attention to Eichisky. So he went off to England and married a girl there. Georgette was enraged to learn of this and demanded from Eichisky 200,000 francs. He refused to give the money to her.

She began to threaten him until the police had to drag her away from the Eichisky home. The day before the murder, Mlle. Hodot sent a final warning to Eichisky's relatives that she was ready to shoot him. Then one evening she followed the jeweler into a drug store. While he was paying a bill at the counter, she pulled out a small automatic pistol and emptied its contents into his back.

Thinking of these things, one wonders indeed if bad luck does not often follow those whose beauty wins wide acclaim. But while I read about them and heard people over here discuss them, I never dreamed, though sometimes I did have a vague fear about it, that I would be placed in a tragic position where I had to take a life in order to save my own.

MUNHALL SUED IN AUTO MISHAP

The Borough of Munhall was named defendant in a $30,000 damage suit filed in Federal Court by Charles F. Kuhns and his wife, Viola M. Kuhns, of North Phelps street, Youngstown, because of injuries Mrs. Kuhns is alleged to have received when driving through the borough December 7, 1930.

The bill of complaint says the couple's automobile dropped into a cave-in on Virginia avenue and Mrs. Kuhns was hurt. She seeks $25,000 damages and her husband $5,000.

Perry Null and his wife, Marie Null, of Pittsburgh, asked $35,000 damages from the Pittsburgh Railways Company for injuries to Mrs. Null in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court. All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

NEW YORK, June 11.

NO MATTER how humble the trade, you will always find men who consider themselves masters in their line. Four out of five plumbers are definitely certain they can plumb much better than the other fellow. I once met an expressman who told me proudly that he was the best trunk lifter in the world. I have a barber who, should you dare tell him someone once gave you a better haircut, would gladly slice a piece from your ear. And so they go.

Such a man, reports Jimmy Cannon, was Enrico, the waiter. A very vain gentleman was Enrico, and not without some justification. For two years he had been working in one of those little Italian speakeasies in the West Forties. Month by month his trade had grown. He knew exactly what each customer wanted. And inasmuch as such a waiter is a great rarity, you can readily understand that Enrico was very much in demand.

As I said before, the joint was a small one. The boss himself stood behind the tiny bar and attended to the needs of his customers. He worked hard. And although even though a waiter's growing popularity meant more money in his pocket, the proprietor began to resent the fact that the waiter was commanding more attention than he.

As time flew by, the boss resented it more and more. He began to put this favored waiter on the pan.

"What's all this excitement about Enrico?" he would ask a customer. "He's not so hot. Have you ever tried Alberto over there? Or Edmundo, the fat fellow? They are both very fine waiters. Better than Enrico in fact. Will you try them?"

No use. The patrons would have nothing of any other waiter. They wanted this man who served each portion of spaghetti as though it were a precious art work.

Meanwhile, all this attention and back-slapping was having its own effect on Enrico. Surely, he felt, he was the greatest waiter in all the world. His chest swelled bit by bit. He began to act as though he owned the place. He even went so far as to change his apron once a week.

One evening, as he gloomily surveyed the situation from behind the bar, the boss was seized with an inspiration. He leaned close to the lone customer at the rail.

"That Enrico," he murmured, "is getting too big-headed. I have an idea for a great joke on him. Suppose we tell him he won't be the big shot much longer. Suppose we tell him that I have hired the greatest of all waiters, the man who always served Mussolini?"

The customer saw the point. He planted the seed a few minutes later. And Enrico came bouncing to the bar.

"What is this I hear?" he cried. "A new waiter is coming?"

The boss gave him a solemn nod.

"It is true," he lied gravely. "He will be here very soon. He speaks English beautifully, even though he has just come from Italy. He is absolutely the finest waiter in the world. He is the man who always served Mussolini."

Enrico swallowed hard. He attempted to talk, but he could not. It was a terrible slap at his pride. The joke spread. Encouraged by his success, the proprietor met each customer who entered and unfolded the little jest. The patrons grinned and assured the boss they would keep it up. And they did.

For five days the jest was in full swing. Enrico's expression grew sadder and sadder. Each morning the boss would inform him that the man who waited on Mussolini would be in the following day. Each table added its little facial.

On the sixth day Enrico failed to show up. As the hours passed the boss grew worried. When the entire day had gone he was very nearly frantic. Suddenly he learned the sad news. Enrico had gone to work in the rival speakeasy, right across the street!

"All right," he cried loudly. "I can get along without him."

But he was mistaken. In five days the absence of Enrico began to tell. The customers were beginning to patronize the place across the street. They wanted their Enrico. By the end of the week the boss knew he was beaten. He waited for Enrico on the corner after work and finally caught him.

"Enrico, my friend," he said coaxingly, "it was all a very big joke. I want you to come back to me as my best waiter. I double your wages. I never hired any waiter who had served Mussolini. It was all just a joke."

"It was a very good joke," he cried, "but now I tell you a better one. You go find a man who waited on Mussolini. You make him work two days and then fire him. If you do this I come back to you. Otherwise, I stay where I am."

That happened a month ago. I think the boss will close his place this Saturday. He can't find a waiter who once served Mussolini!"

She thought:
"I'd dance all evening in spite of the heat—if only you were more careful about 'B.O.'"

She said:
"The show was great, but it's far too hot for dancing!"

She cut short their evening

. . . was 'B.O.' to blame?

COUNTY'S TAX BILLS READY

Tax statements for residents of the county will be available Monday morning, County Treasurer John Francies has announced. Statements for most of the municipalities of the county have been ready for several days, Francies said, and the few remaining city wards and one or two county districts are now being completed.

Those who receive their statements can pay their tax and get a refund of the graded occupational tax or get an exoneration of the former graded levy. Those who do not pay real estate tax can be made eligible for voting this fall by being assessed at the office of the Board for the Revision and Assessment of Taxes for the 50-cent occupational tax and by paying it at the treasurer's office.

He will enter a Pittsburgh hospital, it was said, as soon as his condition permits his removal.

The State Pardon Board recently recommended to Gov. Pinchot that Cauffiel be granted a parole, and the Cambria County Court last week offered the former mayor his freedom, but he refused to pay the costs and fine amounting to $1,500 and remained in jail. The court yesterday issued the order for Cauffiel's release with the understanding that he be returned to the Cambria County jail as soon as his physical condition would permit.

Now! Her Teeth Are 3 Shades Whiter

Impossible with Ordinary Brushing

Now—you can have gleaming white teeth in just a few days. Science has discovered the way to remove ugly yellow and stain—whiten teeth 3 shades in 3 days! It is called the Kolynos Dry-Brush Technique. Try it—use a half-inch of this scientific dental cream on a dry brush twice a day. You'll see a marked change overnight.

When Kolynos enters the mouth it instantly becomes a refreshing FOAM. This FOAM does the work. First it removes yellow and stain and destroys the millions of mouth-germs—190 million in 15 seconds—that cause most tooth and gum troubles. It stimulates the gums and purifies the mouth. Then it CLEANS TEETH RIGHT DOWN TO THE BEAUTIFUL, NATURAL WHITE ENAMEL WITHOUT INJURY. No ordinary brushing can make teeth so white. No mouthwash can give the mouth a cleaner taste.

Why have dull, yellow teeth? Clean them sparkling white and keep them sound and free from decay this way. Start using the Kolynos Dry-Brush Technique. Results overnight. Buy a tube of Kolynos.

Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

Everyone has an Adam's Apple—Every man—every woman has one. Touch your Adam's Apple with your finger. You are actually touching your larynx—this is your voice box—it contains your vocal chords. When you consider your Adam's Apple, you are considering your throat—your vocal chords.

"TOASTING" expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos. These expelled irritants are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE—the modern cigarette. We sell these expelled irritants to manufacturers of chemical compounds. Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why the "TOASTING" Process includes the use of Ultra Violet Rays. LUCKY STRIKE—made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED"—an extra, secret and exclusive heating process. It is this process that expels these harsh irritants. No wonder 20,679 American physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating. No wonder LUCKIES are always kind to your throat. And so we say "Consider your Adam's Apple." Be careful in your choice of cigarettes.

Varying June weddings and plans for June weddings are entertainments for visitors. The Edward Harlows, of New York, who are the house guests this week of the Mortimer Millers, are being extensively entertained while visiting here.

Tomorrow night the Millers will give a dinner for their guests. On Friday evening the Roy Arthur Hunts entertained with a dinner, on Tuesday evening the Frederick I. Merricks, and today Mrs. W. Terrell Johnson gave a luncheon for them.

Honoring another visitor, a Pittsburgher some of the time, Mrs. W. Harry Brown, of Washington and New York, who will spend a month at her Pittsburgh home, the Richard Beatty Mellons gave a small dinner in their home Tuesday evening.

* * *

The avalanche of June weddings and engagements is once more upon us with the advent of sunny June. And their are entertainments for the brides-to-be almost every day.

Announce Betrothal

Today I can tell you about the betrothal of a Pittsburgh girl and a man from the East.

Popular Mary Elizabeth Floyd, daughter of the Thomas Atterbury McGinleys, of Sewickley Heights, is entertaining Saturday evening in the Allegheny Country Club, in honor of Betty Hill Smith, of Dayton, O., her house guest. Betty arrived last week for the Sewickley Horse Show. Also a guest of the McGinleys for the week-end will be Eugene McHenry, of Dayton, who will share honors with Betty at the dinner.

NEWEST ACCESSORIES ADD CHIC TO SPORTS FROCKS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, June 11.—Plus four times the amount of chic ordinarily allotted to the sports frock can be attained by the addition of the right accessories. No more are we content to wear a little frock of tub silk, or, if we are of the strenuous golfer's union, a business-like sweater and skirt, plain and unadorned, with a plain little felt having a ribbon band, as a hat. No, being chic as well as correctly accoutred for tennis or golf is part of the game and adds materially to one's sartorial score. It does not necessarily follow that one is a dub at sports because one chooses clothes that are the last words in smartness, combined with delightfully dressy accessories. Not at all. The sartorial achievements of Genglen, Eileen Bennett, Betty Nuthall, Cecile Aussem and Senorita d'Alvarez are too well known to support that theory. And the smartness of such good golf stars as Glenna Collett and Joyce Wethered is a matter of comment wherever they play.

* * *

BRITAIN, INDIA MOVE TO FREE MORPHINE

Proposal Which Stunned League Parley Revived, Backed by Two Nations

By WINIFRED BLACK

GENEVA, June 11.—When is crude morphine not morphine at all?

When it is grown in India and shipped to England to be made over into heroin, codein and morphine which addict slaves know so well how to use.

LANGUAGE CHANGED

When the Indian delegate proposed the first amendment, which would permit morphine to be shipped everywhere, the conference was stunned and it seemed as if the Indian delegate would withdraw the amendment.

He didn't, he changed it into other language which meant just what the first amendment meant. Great Britain in the person of Malcolm Delevingne, stood right behind India in this astounding position.

The British plans are dead. But what difference will that make if crude morphine can skip from one end of the earth to the other to be made into any kind of dope without hindrance? I cannot believe even five great manufacturing countries who would like to see this amendment supported will dare to come out in open support of it. If they do I do not believe the other countries will let them get away with it.

These international conferences are very educating and we soon discover that "for ways that are dark and tricks that are vain" the Chinese is not at all peculiar.

LIMITATION IGNORED

Experts of the conference turned in a very accurate report on derivatives. At the end of the report they made certain recommendations which did not include a least reference to direct limitation of raw products which produce dope.

The American delegation thanked the experts for their report but said recommendations of any sort whatsoever were no part of such a document.

LETTER SOUGHT IN BANK TRIAL

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 11.—Edward K. Dick, secretary of treasury of the Title and Trust Company of Western Pennsylvania, in his second day of cross examination at the trial of J. F. Ruth, 73-year-old bank president today denied that he had sent a letter detailing the indebtedness as well as the holdings of the Waynesburg Coal Company to the State Banking Department.

A mortgage of $60,000 given by the coal company in which both Ruth and Dick were officers forms one of the chief points of the prosecution. The state claims Ruth put the mortgage in the bank a second time after being ordered to remove it, and that he profited from the transaction.

Judge Thomas H. Hudson today ordered the state to produce the letter which Dick denied writing, saying:

"We want to hear everything in this case. We want it opened wide."

PITTSBURGH AND LAKE ERIE R. R.

TWO ATTACKED BY STRAY CAT

A stray cat climbed the stairs to the third floor apartment of Mrs. Helen Miller, 1637 Fifth avenue, late yesterday, entered the living room and, without warning, leaped upon her two daughters, Hazel, 16, and Margaret, 20, scratching them and biting each on the right hand.

Mrs. Miller and the girls succeeded in chasing the cat onto a window ledge and pushing it off. It landed on the sidewalk, apparently unharmed and ran away.

Police cornered and shot it.

FEAR MEXICAN REVENGE PLOT

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 11.—(INS)—Apprehension for the safety of Col. Charles Clowe, personal representative of the State of Oklahoma, in returning the bodies of Emilio Cortes Rubio and Emanuel Gomez to their homes in Mexico City, today had led to the State Department at Washington advising Gov. W. H. Murray not to permit Col. Clowe to enter Mexico with the bodies.

The report was believed due to reports of ill-feeling existing in Mexico over the slaying of the two youths by a deputy sheriff at Ardmore, Monday.

June 22 was announced today as the date for the trial of W. E. Guess and Cecil Crosby, deputy sheriffs, charged with the murders of Cortes Rubio, second nephew of the President of Mexico, and his school chum.

Body Covered With Little Pimples. Healed by Cuticura.

"My body began to itch and in a few days it was covered with little red pimples. They grew larger every day and began to fester. The pimples itched and burned and I used to rub them with a cloth until they would bleed. My underwear aggravated them. The trouble lasted a long time.

"A friend advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I sent for a free sample of each. They helped me so I purchased more and after using three boxes of Cuticura Ointment and six cakes of Cuticura Soap I was completely healed." (Signed) Philip J. Winters, 314 Stagg St., Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 10, 1930.

EDITOR SAYS

73,000 Miles is only a Start

THE NEW FORD STANDARD SEDAN. Longer, wider body. Slanting windshield

SOME weeks ago we published an account of a Ford that had been driven 73,000 miles in less than a year by three mail carriers in Iowa.

The article created much comment and brought many letters telling of the unusual reliability, economy and long life of the Ford. Here is an interesting letter from the editor of a newspaper in Kansas.

"In one of your recent advertisements in weekly newspapers you tell of a Ford that has been driven 73,000 miles in less than a year.

"That's no mileage at all for a Ford. There is a Ford in this community that was driven 120,000 miles before it was traded in.

"The car was bought in August, 1928, and driven until November, 1930, by its owner. He is a carrier of the Wichita Daily Eagle, making a route of 150 miles daily with a morning and evening paper. On Sunday, only one trip of 75 miles is made. About 50 miles of the route is over paved streets—the rest is on rough dirt and gravel streets through three small towns.

"Operating and up-keep costs were exceptionally low. After the car was traded in for a new Ford I am informed that it was overhauled and is now giving good service to its new owner."

Letters like this are indicative of the substantial worth of the Ford and the high quality built into every part. In every detail of construction it is made to endure—to serve you faithfully and well for many thousands of miles. The price is low because of large production and unusual Ford manufacturing facilities.

PETITION ASKS PLAYGROUND

Residents of the Sixteenth Ward, South Side, are signing a petition to City Council asking for a playground on the site of the city reservoir at 3000 Arlington avenue. The petition will be sent to Council Monday.

Residents of the district say the old reservoir is a menace to the safety of children. The basin was drained several years ago, but water accumulates from rains, and there have been several narrow escapes from drowning.

We Oppose Living Statues

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

The leader of the cult was sentenced to a coat and vest for six months.

The nudists then marched on Germany through the beautiful Rhine districts. All they wore was a tablecloth during dinner. And that was on the table.

If this new idea is a protest against long woolen underwear and the resultant lumpy ankles we commend it.

But the German nudists are overdoing the business. They had no right to stone that Chinese laundry.

You can get thousands of followers if you have an idea as nutty as an almond grove. That's proved by the European fanatics who are marching past important buildings without their umbrellas.

And being a silly fad it's bound to spread to America. Even now there is very little material between a one-piece bathing suit and the great outdoors.

We cast one vote against the nudists.

If you want to be a channel swimmer you've got to stay in the channel.

And we will arrest any disciples of the German cult found in Arizona or Nevada even if they've got seaweed in their ears.

Loses 16 Pounds of Fat—Eats As Usual

Fat Folks—Here's More Proof—One Bottle of Kruschen Salts and Sixteen Pounds Gone—Eats as Usual—Sleeps Better—Costs 85 Cents

Modern science now makes it possible for you to easily and what's best, to SAFELY obtain a bewitchingly lithe, free-from-fat figure and actually enjoy exhilarated health and increase your attractiveness while doing so.

Simply take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—you can hasten the reducing action of Kruschen by going lighter on potatoes, fatty meats and pastries.

Mrs. Ethel Smith, of Norwich, Conn., writes: "I lost 16 pounds with my first bottle of Kruschen. I feel so good in many ways. Being on night duty it was hard to sleep days, but now since taking Kruschen I sleep plenty, eat as usual and lose fat too. I have told two of my friends about Kruschen and they find it as I do."

Unlike other salts, Kruschen doesn't aim to reduce by rushing food thru the system—rather it's a superbly blended combination of SIX separate mineral salts which help glands, nerves and body organs to function properly—it drives poisons and harmful acids from the body.—Kruschen strikes at the usual CAUSE of fat—that's why it's so amazingly successful in cases where everything else has failed!

And just stop to consider how inexpensive Kruschen is—an 85c bottle lasts four weeks and offers the same marvelous reducing and health-giving properties which hitherto wealthy people paid thousands of dollars to go to the famous mineral Spas of Europe to obtain. All druggists the world over sell Kruschen and will give your money back if you don't obtain the results you're after.

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

The most frenzied broadcast in radio today is that supplied by the dance band which looks for its leadership to the rotund figure of B. A. Rolfe.

It is to music what the M. Gibbons is to speech, shooting its tunes to the eardrums with a bang and a speed that has not been approached since George M. Cohan stopped writing musical shows.

* * *

This observer recently watched this outfit in action. It was like being present at artillery practice at Fort Myer. Horns blared mercilessly, saxophones tooted unrestrainedly and xylophones sounded like hailstones on a tin roof. All that musical pep may be given the parlors in what the professors call a big way.

One's first impression upon watching this pouring of musical pep into the microphones is that of endless confusion. Ensembles and soloists are forever rising from their seats and making their way to microphones in order to emphasize this or that instrument. Trumpeters are continuously bobbing up to add their din to the orgy of sound. But there is no confusion. On the contrary, there is order of an unusually effective kind—the effectiveness, say, of a Ford assembling plant turning out cars for the multitudes.

Here is unquestionably the most populous, if not most popular, dance band on the radio. And the most costly. Its activities are mapped out weeks in advance. It employs a personnel, including arrangers, of 100 men. It is heard three times a week in periods of one hour. It rehearses two minutes for every minute it is on air. It calls upon every form of snappy music that has been written in America since Sousa was in swaddling clothes, and its notes penetrate every crossroads of the land. Crossroads? They must reach Mars itself.

* * *

The tempo of the orchestra—it is the fastest that can be provided without snapping the fingers off its musicians—has come in for considerable criticism. People have said that it cannot be danced to. That doesn't bother Rolfe or the sponsor who insists it keep to its speed schedule. It is listened to, said that according, they say, to its sponsor, George Washington Hill, is all that matters.

This band has given B. A. Rolfe a firm rung on the radio ladder after a career of ups and downs in the show business, for it is Rolfe who guides its interpretations of popular tunes. It is Rolfe who assembled it, who, looking about gathered 'round him such dextrous virtuosi of clarinet, saxaphone, accordian and horn as Andy Sannella, Ross Gorman, Charles Magnante and Phil Napoleon.

They are radio big shots in their own right but in Rolfe's Band they are cogs in radio's greatest noise-making machine. It was not so long ago that Magnante was playing his accordion on Staten Island ferry boats at whatever he could scoop up in the way of small change. Today his income from radio is said to be $1,000 a week.

* * *

Students of music say of this outfit that it is mechanical musical con[illegible]ence brought to a highly el[illegible]ent scale. And so it is. Whe[illegible] it sets its teeth—and it is mor[illegible] question of teeth than of finger[illegible] into a Sousa march or a Cohan [illegible] or a Gershwin fox-trot its [illegible] of microphones seems almost f[illegible]e. You get the notion that it [illegible]ld open the windows and be [illegible]rd with equal facility.

Over its activities the rotund Rolfe moves his autocratic fingers like a signaler on a football field, like a baseball manager in his dugout. Never they say is there rebellion. Never even a sign of temperament. Rolfe, with his genial authority, sees to that. The program proceeds with snap and precision and before you know it it is over.

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

CHICAGO, June 11.—With practically all business transacted and J. Clarke Coit, of Chicago, elected president, the radio manufacturers' convention eased up today as some 27,000 dealers prepared to leave for their homes in the United States and Canada. There are some meetings scheduled today and tomorrow, but they are minor in importance. Morris Metcalf, retiring president, suggested that radio manufacturers improve their news paper advertising copy and spend liberally to stimulate business. C. C. Colby, of Canton, Mass., chairman of the R. M. A. committee on legislation, predicted less interference this fall through a plan being developed by the Radio Commission and stated also that he could foresee the use of higher wavelengths in this country.

Al Williamson, of the NBC press relations here, has announced that John R. Cumerford, whom Pittsburghers may remember for his KQV appearances, has been signed by the National Broadcasting Company as a staff artist. Cumerford, a steelworker at Youngstown, O., was discovered and developed by John R. Royal, program manager of NBC. He is a tenor and former star of the University of Alabama football team.

* * *

Golf, yachting and aviation have ensnared several Pittsburgh delegates. Seen at these sports yesterday were Harold Goldstein, A. Samuels, Elmer Hamburg, A. A. Buehn, Harry Schwartz, Max Fischman, James E. Kennen, Ben Bloom, C. M. Clark and Carl Bachrach. A score of Pittsburgh dealers have been observed scanning, with critical eye, the original works of Rembrandt, Van Dyck, Jan Steen, Sargent and Raisdael on display at the art institute.

* * *

Hundreds have visited the planetarium, which is located on a small peninsula jutting out into Lake Michigan. A motion picture camera revolves in the center of this planetarium and portrays the sky, the sun, the moon and the constellations.

* * *

Lupe Velez, Mexican movie star, who is playing at a downtown theater, visited the exhibition. She is clever and resembles Bebe Falvo, blues singer of Pittsburgh.

* * *

Hal Metzger of WTAM, Cleveland, reports that Fritzi Scheff is to tell the inside story of Victor Herbert and the operetta Mlle. Modiste, on the red network this Sunday at 7. She will be interviewed by Henry M. Neely, known as the "Old Stager." Miss Scheff is famous for her singing of "Kiss Me Again" in this operetta.

* * *

A short wave receiver that picked up W8XK was one of the high spots on the exhibition floor today. Besides logging the sister station of KDKA, the set pulled in G5SW at Chelmsford, England, 13RO at Rome and WBZA at Boston, near dusk. It is a marvelous little set and portends a great development in this field.

* * *

"Uncle Abe and David" are coming back to the network on Monday, June 22. They will be sponsored by a large meat packing concern located in Chicago.

* * *

Spent a pleasant hour with Bobby Meeker, orchestra leader, who is filling Ben Bernie's place at Hotel Sherman. Also met Charley Hamp, the "Thirty Minutes of Sunshine" man, who is competing with Amos 'n' Andy.

Carl W. Harris, former Pittsburgh newspaperman, is writing continuity for network radio accounts.

Having visited approximately half of the 21 radio stations in this city I have come to the conclusion that WENR and KYW have the prettiest studios. WBBM is a small place and not to be compared with the Columbia outlet in Pittsburgh. WJAS, WMAQ is similar in size to WGAR in Cleveland.

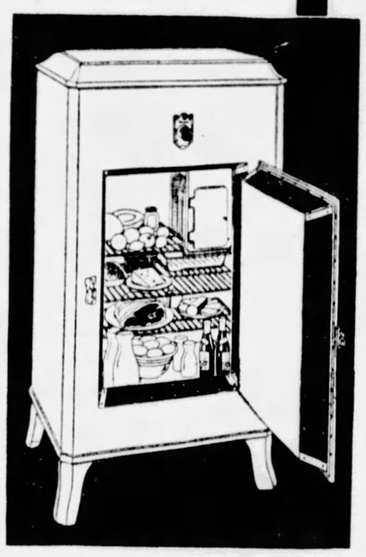
MIGHTY MONARCH OF THE ARCTIC
Keeps Food Fresh despite 125° in Coachella Valley



MAJESTIC performance could receive but little higher commendation than that given it by a user in a recent letter . . .

"I just recently purchased from your local dealer, for cash, a seven-foot Majestic," says this Californian, "and it is truly a very fine machine. Before purchasing, I investigated no less than thirteen other standard makes . . . yours was the best and my wife is certainly very well pleased with it. We live here in Coachella Valley where the thermometer goes to 125 degrees without a bit of trouble, and a good unit is essential."

MILLER OUSTER SCORED AT PITT

Members of the faculty of the University of Pittsburgh have protested to the board of trustees of the Ohio State University against the dismissal from the faculty of Prof. H. A. Miller of the department of sociology. Forty-seven members of the Pitt faculty yesterday met and signed a letter which was sent to the president of the Ohio institution. The letter said:

"Our interest in academic freedom leads us to direct attention to the fact that the statement given by you as the basis of the case against Prof. Miller seems inconsequential. He is widely known as an experienced teacher and competent scholar, who speaks with authority in his field. Such arbitrary action as you have taken would seem to indicate, unless the procedure is quickly remedied, a grave infringement upon scientific investigation and discussion at Ohio State University."

SHAFT TO HONOR BRADY PAUL

NEW CASTLE, Pa., June 11.—(AP.)—Plans have been completed to place a monument in memory of Corp. Brady Paul, of the state highway patrol, who was shot and killed December 27, 1929. W. Glenn Dague and Mrs. Irene Schrader were executed for the crime early this year at Rockview prison.

The monument will rest on the spot along the Butler-New Castle highway where Paul was shot down as he and a fellow officer stopped Dague and Mrs. Schrader as they fled from a Butler store robbery.

Nurse Found Dead Of Gas in Room

NEW YORK, June 11.—(AP.)—With the ace of hearts clutched in her hand and a deck of playing cards spread before her, Miss Marie Richey, 28, a trained nurse, was found dead yesterday in her West Ninty-fifth street apartment, apparently a suicide by gas.

Police said she was a niece of the late Adolph J. Lichstern, wealthy Chicago grain broker. They attributed her action to an unhappy love affair.

Woman Veteran Of 'Red' Army Dies

MOSCOW, June 11.—(AP.)—The Soviet press has announced the death of Dr. Tina Shiperovich, one of the first women to join the ranks of the Red Army at the outbreak of the 1917 revolution. Dr. Shiperovich, who was raised in a Ghetto, lived through a number of pogroms, and at the age of 17 entered the Leningrad Medical College.

When she was mustered out of the Red army she was given a number of important posts in the Communist party.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 11.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Out here in Los Angeles it was suddenly brought to public attention that when school was out, children who had been provided with lunches because their parents couldn't afford them would be without them again. Well, the response by everybody was wonderful. But you know that's a situation that's liable to exist in a lot of towns. They might just conclude that because school was out there was no reason to keep up the lunches. There is not a town or city that won't gladly keep the children if the people know the cause. So this is just in case your town might have overlooked it. Out here it was the Parent-Teachers that did it. Some towns might not have that organization. Yours,

WILL.

ARTISTS RALLY TO DEFEND JOHN KANE

With attendance at his one-man exhibition in the Junior League headquarters doubled, John Kane received many sympathizers today. Artists meanwhile continued to take stands for and against Kane in the squabble arising over the revelation that some of his paintings are done over photographs.

Much interest was reported in New York, where noted collectors have bought some of Kane's paintings. From Duncan Phillips, of the Phillips Memorial Gallery, in Washington, came a statement in support of the artist and house painter.

SHOW DRAWS CROWD

Throngs of spectators are visiting the Kane exhibit in the Clark Building. Attendants report that most callers are middle aged, or beyond, come to tell the painter that they still like his work. Students, too, are coming to see the work, hailed by some as the most representative of Pittsburgh and, by others, as uninspired copying.

The disclosure that Kane has used photographs as a base for some of his work was made last week by Milan Petrovits, a contemporary of Kane's. The "Strip" painter readily admitted the practice, denied his intent had been unethical, said none of his canvases or better works were done in that manner.

JURY TARGET OF ATTACK

Petrovits today again came to the attack and said:

"Slowly the general impression develops into a popular belief that Kane is a martyr to a certain kind of persecution and now is the time to stand by his work of 'Art.' As far as my discoveries are concerned, this revelation was not directed exactly toward the artist, but to show the fallacy of our gentlemen of the art jury, both in the international and local shows. I am ready to prove that the men of the jury overlooked the fact that between a painted photo and an original painting there is a great difference.

HAD BEEN WARNED

"My attack on Kane's art seems vicious, but I can state that he was warned on several occasions that he should refrain from painting over photographs or from photographs, and, as this warning did not serve its purpose, I was forced to defend art even if I had to stand alone. I am ready to discuss this with any person.

"If the art lovers want to help Kane in his art, it is not so much that they should stand by him now, but that, to show their appreciation for his original works of art, they should buy them and discourage him in his practice in painting hurried pictures marked 'original paintings.'"

PHILLIPS BACKS KANE

Duncan Phillips, internationally known collector, said:

"The disclosure that John

THE DEATH FALL OF THE 13-YEAR-OLD BLUFF SCHOOLGIRL

Down over this 100-foot stretch of the cliff between Boulevard of the Allies and Second avenue, Suzanne Crowell, 13, 64 Stevenson street, plunged to her death. She and her aunt, Helen Busha, only 12, were playing at scaling cliffs near Pride street.

Grief Crushes Destitute Kin of Girl Killed In Fall Down Cliff

A modest three room house in the rear of 64 Stevenson street was filled with sadness today by the death of Suzanne Crowell, 13, who was killed late yesterday in a 100-foot fall down the cliff between the Boulevard of the Allies and Second avenue, near Pride street.

The tragedy added to the burdens of her mother, Mrs. Mary Crowell, a widow, who was supporting her own three children, her parents and their four children, by working as a domestic in the Mercy Hospital. She was prostrated with grief when informed of her daughter's death.

Neighbors stated that the family had been without funds recently and for some time has had barely sufficient food.

Suzanne and her aunt, Helen Busha, 12, who lived together, were scaling the cliff and were but 25 feet from the boulevard when Suzanne slipped and fell to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad tracks above Second avenue. Horror-stricken, Helen screamed. Firemen from No. 4 Engine Company and police under the direction of Battalion Chief George Sparr were summoned and lowered a rope and rescued her.

HUNT FOR BROTHERS

Failure of the victim's brother, Wilbert Crowell, 10, and William Busha, 9, Helen's brother, to return home from the Forbes School yesterday, prompted the two girls in a search which led to the Monongahela River. The girls had descended the steps from the boulevard and after learning that the boys had not gone swimming, started back home.

When they reached the hillside they decided to scale the cliff. Both started up by clinging to small projections and were near the top when Suzanne fell.

SUZANNE CROWELL

Council met with all members present, transacted business for nearly an hour. The committee did not appear.

BAR TO BALLOT ON JUDGESHIP CANDIDATES

Lawyers Plan to Complete Referendum by July 15, Last Day for Petitions

A referendum among the lawyers of Allegheny County upon candidates for the seven judgeships of Common Pleas Court, to be nominated at the primaries September 15 and elected in November, was decided upon by the Allegheny County Bar Association at a special meeting late yesterday.

The association voted to complete the referendum by July 15, or 10 days before the last day for candidates in the primary to file nominating petitions. This proposal by Attorney John G. Buchanan, who originally advocated the referendum, was adopted by the 106 members present by a vote of 61 to 45. He argued that candidates successful in the referendum would thereby be enabled to file papers for the primary.

Attorney George J. Campbell contended that the referendum should not be held until August 1, the last day for withdrawal of primary candidates, arguing that the referendum should be confined to avowed candidates.

A proposal by Attorney William B. McFall that candidates should pledge themselves not to solicit votes in the referendum was voted down.

A letter was presented to the meeting signed by seven present judges, joint candidates for the places to be balloted upon, stating they wished to make clear they were not opposed to a referendum sponsored by the association. The leter pointed out in presenting their candidacies jointly to the voters they followed custom established by their predecessors, repeatedly approved by the people and departed from only in 1927.

COUNCIL VOTES PARK TALKIES

Election Is Too Late to Suit Colonel House

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Col. House says the next president of this glorious federation will be a Democrat.

The Colonel will be remembered as a White House spokesman during an administration where no explanations were necessary.

He was a happy combination of patience on a monument, the three wise monkeys of Japan and Rodin's Thinker. A profound scholar and one who was popularly supposed to wear his thinking cap while studying alphabetical soup.

With the Colonel talking now it seems that it is all right to cut out the muffler outside the party limits.

"If the election is held next week," says the Colonel, "a Democrat will be elected."

But we hold our elections in November, Colonel, just to prevent the political enemy from blaming it on the hot sun.

July is no month for politics or politicians. We're convinced that Al Smith would have done much better if he hadn't had his picture taken in a bathing suit.

Even Mr. Coolidge issues a June ultimatum that the brains of the country need a rest. As Cal made this statement in Vermont we suspect he has been talking on the long-distance telephone.

4-Leaf Clovers

MISS MARGARET M'CREADY

SCHOOL TO HOLD TAG DAY

The George Junior Republic of Western Pennsylvania, school for delinquent boys and girls, will have a tag day Saturday. Four leaf clovers are to be sold with the idea:

"Give Luck and Get Luck."

This will be the first tag day the school has had since 1919. The institution is located at Grove City and takes care of 60 children. Mrs. Annette Thackwell Johnson, president of the Authors' Club, of Pittsburgh, is general chairman. She said:

"The George Junior Republic is a school where children who haven't found themselves may do so. In the 21 years of the school's existence, only 5 per cent of the children were rearrested."

Mrs. R. T. M. McCready is chairman of the tag day in Sewickley, and her daughter, Miss Margaret McCready, will take charge in Allegheny Station. Other chairmen and their posts are Mrs. Alonzo T. Briney, East Liberty; Mrs. Henry Braun and Mrs. G. W. Grime, North Side; Mrs. L. S. Levin, buildings; Betty Childs, Duquesne Club and Farmers Bank; Mrs. Taylerson, Brookline; Mrs. J. S. Douthitt, downtown, and Miss Ehne, Oakland.

The school is a minature republic, Mrs. Johnson said. The children govern themselves, elect their own lawyers, judges and juries, make their own arrests and have their own jails. There is no wall or fence about the place, she said.

PROJECT TOLD AT GRADUATION EXERCISES

Degrees Conferred on Class Of 271; President Reveals Program of Expansion

Speaking to an audience of more than 3,000, including 271 students on whom degrees were conferred last night at the fifty-third annual commencement of Duquesne University in Memorial Hall, the Very Rev. J. J. Callahan, president, announced the completion of plans for two new buildings. Construction of a faculty building and a new Science Hall will begin as soon as possible.

Other changes, part of a definite program of expansion, include complete revision of the program of studies in many departments of the university. This will become effective in September.

President Callahan said plans for the new buildings have been completed and are in the hands of the university administration. He gave no details of their cost and construction.

HONORS CONFERRED

Honorary degrees were conferred on Dr. John J. Sullivan, professor of business law at the Wharton school of the University of Pennsylvania and member of the Philadelphia County bar, and upon Oliver K. Eaton, member of the Allegheny County bar, former instructor in the Duquesne University Law School and donor of the Father Hehir memorial law oratory prize. Dr. Sullivan was given the degree of doctor of letters and the doctor of laws degree was conferred on Attorney Eaton.

In his address, 'Wherein Is the Value of a Higher Education," Dr. Sullivan deplored that the functions and value of a college education are so little understood.

Since co-education went generally into effect at Duquesne University in September, 1927, the first general graduation of women students took place last night. The majority of the women are enrolled in the school of education and the school of music. Sister M. Blanche O'Reilley, of the Sister of St. Joseph, was the first nun to receive the masters degree in dramatic literature. Rev. Jerome D. Hannon, secretary to Bishop Boyle, graduated with the degree of bachelor of laws. He is one of the few priests possessing that degree.

North Side Veteran Dies of Poisoning

George Earhardt, 32, of 1526 Garfield street, North Side, who swallowed poison in his home several days ago, died this morning in Allegheny General Hospital, it was reported to the coroner. Earhardt left a note to a sister willing to her his government bonus for war service. In addition to placing his signature on the note, Earhardt also placed his fingerprints on the farewell letter.

Spurned Man Cuts Throat In Fiancee's Home, Dies

His proposal of marriage refused, homicide detectives say, Nathan Corma, 47, of 1616 Jancey street, slashed his throat in the home of the woman he had courted, inflicting wounds which caused his death several hours later this morning in the Pittsburgh Hospital. Corma, detectives reported, cut his throat in the home of Mrs. Dora Ritt, at 1874 Jancey street.

According to Homicide Detectives Harry Scott and Al Grayber, Corma had been courting Mrs. Ritt for several weeks. Last night, with Charles Fair, of 1616 Jancey street, he went to the Ritt home. The suicide did not make any Detectives said that Mrs. Rit[illegible] them that Corma asked her to marry him and that she refused. Corma then walked into the bathroom.

A few moments later, Mrs. Ritt said, she saw Corma stagger from the room, bleeding at the throat. Her cries attracted Fair from another room and aroused her two sons, Leo, 16, and Frank, 18, who had gone to bed. Corma then returned to the bathroom and inflicted more wounds. He was taken to the hospital by Mrs. Ritt and Fair.

ARTISTS RALLY TO DEFEND JOHN KANE

Kane has on occasions painted over photographs would only injure his reputation if it could be proved that such was his invariable practice and that the paintings sold to museums and collectors were done in that child-like way. The pictures accepted by the juries for the Carnegie International and invited to the Museum of Modern Art were painted in oil on canvas and the ones over photographs in the Junior League exhibition were probably done to keep his hand in practice during convalescence from an accident which kept him from painting directly from nature.

"I paid $100 for 'Across the Strip,' and none of his quaint pictures have been sold for big prices. He has won the admiration of good judges of quality in art because, in spite of his lack of knowledge and training, he comes closer to the essentials of expression than most of the competent professionals who resent his success.

"I have never seen Kane, but it would be consistent with his character as revealed in his pictures if he saw nothing wrong in supplementing the deficiencies of his observation and learning with occasional help from photographs.

PRACTICE NOT RARE

"Many famous artists of great skill have used photographic means and one popular illustrator has grown rich in doing decorations dependent on their photographic basis.

"Kane's unsophisticated pictures are as devoid of tricks as the works of a little child. Their innocence shames the attitude of those responsible for this absurb publicity."

Malcolm Parcell, Washington, Pa., said:

"I wouldn't think it destroyed the value of his genuine work. It's hard to comment on another artist's works. I'm not sure whether he knew he was doing wrong or not."

Raymond S. Simboli, Pittsburgh, said:

"I don't know. I think the old man's all right. It's just those few things that were wrong. I admire Kane's work very much. He's too honest a man to try to fool the public."

F. G. Ackerson, Wilkinsburg, said:

"John Kane is accused of having painted over photographs used as a drawing base a few times in his life, perhaps without knowing he was committing an unethical act. Do the few pictures which he has made from photographs prove all others lacking in artistic merit?"

Norwood MacGilvary, Pittsburgh, said:

"I think his pictures are just as good now as they ever were. Those who liked them before should like them now; those who didn't won't have any reason to like them any better now."

Miss Anna G. Woodside, Pittsburgh, said:

"It is not jealousy that caused Milan Petrovits to make this disclosure. He had the courage to wish to prove conviction. Mr. Kane ought to be glad if there is a distinction in his work, if there is. His best vindication would be, I think, to have an artist or some other person watch him actually at work on a canvas."

BANKERS HOLD CONFERENCES

A heavy day of business activity marked today's program of delegates to the twenty-ninth annual convention of the American Institute of Banking, meeting this week at the William Penn Hotel. C., and a conference on public speaking under William A. Polk, of Los Angeles, the delegates spent the remainder of the day participating in an entertainment program.

Following luncheon, the delegates boarded the steamer Washington for a trip down the Ohio River to Legionville, where they were conveyed by special train to Kennywood Park. Climaxing the day's program was a sight-seeing trip to Mount Washington to view the city.

"On Sunday, December 1, she was going out and I asked her to prepare something to eat for me. She said, 'If I do I will put poison in it.' She came home about 12 o'clock and got something to eat and asked me to eat with her. She asked me again and I ate a little and about 10 minutes later I got deathly sick. I told her to go for a doctor and she went out and never came back."

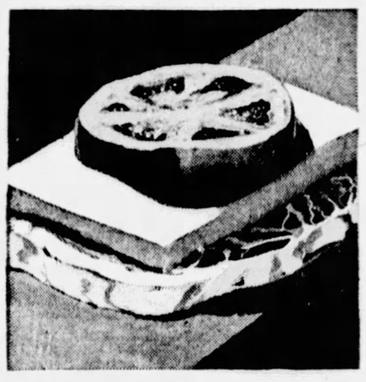
DELICIOUS emergency dishes

HAM AND TOMATO GRILL

Take a slice of boiled ham ¼ inch thick and about three inches square. Spread with Gulden's. On top of this place a thin slice of American cheese and slice of tomato. Grill under broiler until cheese is melted and tomato browned.



"OF all times when I wanted things especially nice!" How often do you make that exclamation when a valued friend arrives unexpectedly and there is an emergency meal to be prepared.

Yet it is easy to have things especially nice on short notice. It's the same old problem of giving an extra deliciousness to simple foods. Gulden's Prepared Mustard, the wonder-working seasoning, is an invaluable help in such moments. It brings a "French Chef touch" to scrambled eggs; makes Delicatessen dishes delightfully different, and gives the perfect flavor to salads. Creamed dishes are useful in emergencies, and there is nothing like Gulden's to give them an appetizing zest.

There are millions of atoms of rare flavor in every drop of Gulden's Mustard. We search the world for the finest mustard seeds and delicate spices. We blend them with skilful exactitude in just the right proportion for seasoning. You will never know how good food can taste until you use Gulden's to bring out the hidden flavor in meats, vegetable dishes and left-overs.

COUNCIL HEARS ZONING FIGHT

Mrs. Mary Manius, 616 Eureka street, Allentown, who wants the city to commercialize the district in which she lives by changing the terrirtory from a B zoning district, fought back at one of those who protested before Council yesterday when she said:

"If it is all right to rent to a bootlegger, which one of the women has been doing, it ought to be all right for me to get the privilege of operating a store. And another thing, I was told that it was going to cost money to hush this protest."

President John S. Herron brought the proceeding to a close by adjourning the hearing for two weeks. Before adjournment, Councilman W. Y. English proposed passing an ordinance to change the zoning regulations, so Mrs. Manius could open her store, and repealing it two or three weeks later. This, he explained, would prevent anyone else operating a store in the neighborhood.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute.

Overtures, Oysters, Art, Held Sway in 1880 With Pat Rooney

By GEORGE SEIBEL

More memories of auld lang syne are awakened by some playbills dating back to 1880 received from William Miller, of Termon avenue, North Side. These bills have no associations with Edwin Booth or Lawrence Barrett, but do enshrine another name just as famous if not quite as immortal. Pat Rooney! He is proclaimed by the playbill to be "the very best Irish performer in the world, the genuine, the original, the great, the only." But a footnote tells that he has "thousands of imitators." And the public is also assured that "the thunders of applause and unbounded hilarity that greet this gentleman's performance has made him the talk of every city in America."

George Seibel

Superlatives were in order then, for on the same bill Miss Mollie Wilson "holds the leading position among serio-comic stars," while Wood and Beasley "have won the proud title of king of music makers." How they could both be king at the same time is not explained. Perhaps each was half a king.

Among the remarkable feats promised by the program was one by Joe Lamont, the "Jungle Aborigine," who "will kick a hat held 10 feet in the air and afterward held still higher."

WHO WROTE SHAKESPEARE?

Baconians would be interested in the opening number of the bill, "Who Wrote Shakespeare?" which is described as "our standard novelty exhibition of the universe, undoubtedly as brilliant as a dream of the orient, ushered in by the laughable piece of absurdity."

Dave Walling, a German character comedian played Lady Macbeth in this sketch, while the aforesaid happy Hottentot Joe Howard appeared as Macbeth. Hamlet was taken by S. Beasley, one of the kindly music makers, who could play on the "piccolo, concertina, gondola and coffee pots." Romeo was presented by T. G. Ducrow, another of the "jungle aborigines."

Maybe the question "who wrote Shakespeare" was answered by opening the graves of Bacon and Shakespeare the next day, and whichever had turned over in his grave would naturally be adjudged the author.

TRIMBLE & VIERHELLER

Two places of entertainment are represented in these playbills that belong to the days before Harry Williams' Academy of Music. One is Trimble's Varieties, where Baby Blanche "the wonder of the 19th century," gave her "unrivaled budget of vocal gems," while Miss Emma D'Zoda, "the Empress of Song and Dance," warbled "Blue Eyes and Golden Hair."

The other place is Vierheller's Concert Garden, at 70 Diamond street, which may have been the precursor of the famous Tivoli Garden in the basement of what is now Warner's Theater.

Henry Vierheller was proprietor of the Garden, while Eugene Schmidt was leader of the orchestra. The orchestra ran largely to overtures, playing nine of them in a single evening's bill.

Frank and Irene Murdoch seem to have been the bright particular stars of this entertainment, appearing in "a new, original and unsurpassable protean burletta," which was entitled "Trouble." In the course of this protean burletta Frank appeared as Ole Bull and Irene as Jenny Lind.

They were followed by Rel Mueab (evidently his name was plain Baetumier), the Fire King, "who has been a mystery to the world and has called forth these exclamations: Is he man, or is he an ambassador from his Satanic Majesty?"

Then there was a lunch and oyster bar, with "Shell Oysters a specialty." It was a good old world, gone to come back no more!

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Mrs. Fifi Stillman McCormick, probably the most talked-of woman in America, talks herself for the first time in sound motion pictures in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, now being shown at leading theaters. The 52-year-old farmer wife of the millionaire banker, consented to an interview with the Globe Trotter seated beside her 32-year-old bridegroom, Fowler McCormick, grandson of John D. Rockefeller, in their honeymoon cottage at East Hampton, Long Island.

Mrs. Stillman McCormick, imparting every indication of her complete happiness, naturally talks of happiness and outlines her philosophy of marriage and love.

OFF FOR NORTH POLE

Among other subjects in the current issue is the departure of Sir Hubert Wilkins on the first leg of his dash in the submarine, Nautilus, under the ice to the North Pole. The submarine is shown leaving Provincetown, Mass., and there are statements from Sir Hubert Wilkins, intrepid head of the expedition, and Capt. Danenhower, navigator. From time to time in the future the voice of the Globe Trotter will detail the progress of this remarkable expedition, more fantastic than ever dreamed of by Jules Verne.

Col. Charles Lindbergh and his wife, Anne Morrow Lindbergh, are seen trying out their new plane after it had been fitted out with pontoons, ready for the proposed trip across the Arctic wastes to the Orient. This subject contains a fine posed picture of Lindy and Anne and magnificent shots of the big plane in the air.

WRESTLES WITH LION

Melvin Kunz, youthful trainer of animals in Los Angeles, is shown in a thrilling wrestling match with a giant lion in a roped arena. Melvin pummels the lion all over the ring. When the enraged beast becomes particularly fierce, Melvin chases him from the ring.

Thousand of British Legionnaires are shown assembled before the Cenotaph on Legion Day to honor their dead comrades.

Champion wood-choppers of Australia compete in a tourney at Sydney. Contestants first climb poles and then chop away at blocks of wood at the top.

I. K. S. Players' Meeting Open to Public

Louis Isaacs, director of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement Players, will announce the conditions under which the players will accept original one-act plays for production at the Theresa L. Kaufmann Theater, and also the title and tryout dates of the next players' production, at an open meeting to be held in the settlement Tuesday evening. Any person interested in amateur dramatics, either acting, direction, scenic design, costuming, or playwriting, is invited to attend this meeting.

Warner Revue Tryouts Tomorrow Night

Talent for the "Pittsburgh on Parade" revue, to be given in the Stanley June 26, will be selected tomorrow night. Those chosen by Bob Alton and Jerry Mayhall, of the Warner production staff, will begin rehearsing the first part of next week. It is thought likely that 150 persons will be in the show. Several "big surprises" are promised.

A 'Whoopee Party' In Penn Tonight

Another of the "Whoopee Parties" will be staged in the Penn tonight. Radio entertainers and other local favorites will appear in a sort of an afterpiece to the regular 9:45 stage show. The stars from the current Loew unit, Mitchell and Durant, will act as masters of ceremonies. The initial "Whoopee Party" was held last week.

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

Golly, how the shivers race up and down your skin when you read about such a thing . . . I mean that poor little girl who was sitting in the front row of the mezzanine at the Globe Theater the other evening . . . And was killed by a falling weight . . . Because a stupid employe let it drop through the skylight . . . She was only 22, and so pretty, the cop told me . . . She was with her gentleman friend and they were but two of four people sitting in the whole row . . . And she had only been in the place five minutes—and then . . . It was carelessness on the part of a slow mind—but his remorse must be terrible . . . Wonder how come the May 30 issue of the Satdee Evepost featured the tag of Bozeman Bulger and the contents of the mag offered nothing from his nimble pen? . . . Funny thing about that race the other day . . . Jolson, who always plays hunches, had a gee-gee in the 6th stanza which he owns . . . Named "Skyway," and it came in next-to-closing . . . The winner was "Black Mammy."

I can start more trouble . . . Now it is the Department of Commerce at Washington which is being bombarded with letters from all over the country, it says in its letter . . . Because of my report that "for one dollar the U. S. Bureau of Standards will test and regulate your watch—but they keep it a month" . . . As a matter of fact the Bureau does test watches, it writes, but it does not regulate or adjust them . . . And that the fees run from $2.50 to $6, depending upon the nature of the test . . . And that the time required varies from 15 days to 2 months . . . Well, those are some other things I never knew till now, and what are they gonna do with a iggerint person? . . . But Mr. Burgess, the director, who wrote the letter, is iggerint, too . . . He wrote me care of the Herald-Tribune and my face is still red.

Wonder if there is anything to that buzz from the Gold Coast about the lad who was showing off with a gun—and it went off—shooting away a hunk of Richard Arlen's cheek? . . . And that expert surgery saved Arlen's career, and that it all has been kept so quiet, etc. . . . Elinor Hunt, who married Rex Lease and then left him, has an interesting story about the black eye the papers said Rex gave her . . . Elinor argues it was from an auto crash. . . . Say, it could be . . . It seemed strange seeing the grand old gent of the theater witnessing his first night club girlie show . . . Dan Frohman, bless him . . . And he liked it, too, that night at the Hollywood . . . Channing Pollock was with him and I was wondering what the neighbors would say over in Jersey when they heard . . . Those legit showmen remind me that this week there are only 22 legit theaters open compared to 30 this week last season. . . . And that the Better Minds agree that unless something happens before winter comes there are too many unemployed around who will be willing to take a chance on being shot.

Well, I see my neighbor, Mr. Coolidge, up and gave his syndicate boss his two weeks' notice . . . Because, as he pointed out in a recent article, every man must take off time now and then to relax . . . At first, some of us thought he was quitting because of stiff competition, for a wag in Judge recently remarked, you can hardly get a table in any of the night clubs because of the numerous columnists . . . But no, it appears that Mr. Coolidge does not choose to run—a column every day of his life . . . There are fish to bait, and shady trees to loll under, and posies to pick . . . When he quits the town on July 1 to holiday until September, those of us who cannot get time off will envy him so . . . Maybe when you mellow with age you just do not care about syndication bosses and the profits they sacrifice . . . You simply say: "See you later—my brain is weary, and I want to play a little" . . . Don Marquis, who was one of the better paragraphers, hit many of us between the orbs in that magazine piece he did about colyuming—and why he finally chucked it . . . What a crack it was, I'll never forget it. . . . When he said that his column kept reminding him of a grave 23 inches deep . . . Lincoln said his father taught him to work, but never taught him to love it.

Of all the crazy fables that gain momentum after some sapidillo starts it going was the wild one about the late Rockne . . . "It's the real inside dope," you hear the desperate-for-attention locals say by way of preface . . . Then they proceed to awe you with this fantastic account of what happened just before the plane that carried Rockne fell . . . A holdup guy goes the yarn, heard of a passenger in the plane who had $50,000 on him . . . So the bad holdup man robbed him, and then, just before the robber jumped, with a parachute, of course, he left a time-bomb in the plane! . . . Well, all right, then . . . But there was a guy in the editorial rooms who offered that story to the editor for "your usual rates" . . . Laughs being so scarce these days, all of us begged the fellow for more . . . That Harry V. Wade's clowning makes me laugh loud, too . . . Particularly when he twits the statement of an official who said anybody can live on $1.75 a week, and Harry adds: "But not on and on?" . . . And that things are so awful on Broadway that one theatrical producer is painting the rear line of his chorus on the back drop! . . . It's little things like that, that make me afraid to die . . . I want to linger long in a world that has a clown like Gil Seldes . . . Imagine, the most amusing gag of the month coming from Gilbert, who is usually so serious . . . He laid me low with his gag about the movie extra who went to see himself in his first movie, but, unfortunately, blinked—and so missed himself entirely . . . Haw!!!

Sylvia Sidney, Phillips Holmes Now to Be Co-Featured In 'Street Scene'

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, June 11.

When Sylvia Sidney returns to the Paramount lot after completing the ingenue lead in "Street Scene," she will be reunited with Phillips Holmes for the third time.

"Break Up," a best seller by Hagar Wilde, has been purchased for these two players. The other two in which they appeared together are: "An American Tragedy" and "Confessions of a Co-Ed."

Miss Wilde's story has a New York background and dramatizes the effect of a large city on its inhabitants. Being so far in the future no supporting cast or director has been assigned.

Phillips Holmes

Holmes has another picture before "Break-Up," the lead in "The Man I Killed."

Like many other players who had planned European jaunts and other vacations, Miss Sidney has had to cancel a trip to Hawaii because of her future work.

However, she did maneuver 10 days off and has returned to town with considerable knowledge of farm life, having spent the entire time on a ranch.

MEETING ALL COMERS

Leo Carrillo tells the story of a prize fighter who had been successfully defeating all his opponents. Finally came the day when he was to meet the champion.

"If you beat this boy we'll go to England and I'll frame it for us to meet the king," promised his manager.

"Okeh," replied the poluka, "what's his weight?"

Future Bills

The curtain during the engagement of the "Follies" next week in the Nixon will be at 8:15 o'clock every night and at 2:15 o'clock at the matinees, due to the length of the performances. Seats are now selling at the box office.

"Lure of the City," a melodrama, will be presented tonight as the opening production of the new season of Capt. Menke's Golden Rod Showboat at Montrose. Vaudeville will be presented between the acts. Last year the boat played an 18-week engagement at Montrose.

"Up Pops the Devil," a comedy laid in Greenwich Village, will open a run in both the Fulton and Sheridan Square Theaters tomorrow. It was taken from the Broadway stage success and has a cast including Carole Lombard, Norman Foster, Skeets Gallagher, Lilyan Tashman, Stuart Erwin and Joyce Compton.

"Laughing Sinners," newest Joan Crawford picture, opens tomorrow in the Penn. It is a version of Kenyon Nicholson's stage play, "The Torch Song." Neil Hamilton, Clark Gable, Cliff Edwards and Marjorie Rambeau have the leading roles in support of the star.

Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter are co-starred in "Daddy Long Legs," which comes to the Stanley tomorrow. On stage Dick Powell will offer "Parlor Sports."

"Melody of the Heart," a German-made picture, dealing with the romance of peasant and city life in Hungary, continues in the Pitt. It won nice praise from the local critics.

Conway Tearle returns to the screen in Billie Dove's starring picture, "The Lady Who Dared," which opens tomorrow in both the Davis and Enright theaters. The picture will remain a week in the Davis and three days in the Enright.

AUTOIST FREED IN MAN'S DEATH

Albert Stillwell, 5429 Walnut street, is free today of a charge of involuntary manslaughter, a jury in Criminal Court having been directed by Visiting Judge O. Clair Kent, of Crawford County, to acquit him of responsibility for the death of James F. Kelly, 43, of 1049 Murrayhill avenue. Kelly was killed April 5 when an automobile in which he was riding, driven by Stillwell, struck a pole at Shady avenue and Fair Oaks street.

Michael Murphy, 201 South Craig street, a passenger in the car, who was injured, testified a wheel of the machine caught in a car track, causing it to skid. He declared Stillwell had not been drinking, as charged in the indictment. After his testimony the judge directed the acquittal.

CHANGE ASKED IN AUTO SIGNS

Warning signs and signals on all highways in the state should be uniform and near enough to the road level to be seen at night, the highway safety committee of the Pittsburgh Motor Club decided at a meeting today in the Chamber of Commerce.

The committee will ask state officials to use diagrams rather than words on signs indicating turns or intersections, and to erect all signs not higher than 50 inches. Members of the committee reported many signs on state roads are seven feet above the concrete. Signs on Allegheny County roads were praised by the committee.

Forgotten Tools Plea Helps to Free Plumber

PHILADELPHIA, June 11.—(AP.)—Jacob Norman, Reading plumber, pleaded he forgot his tools and was freed in Federal Court of charges of operating a still.

He said he was called to fix some pipes in a Reading home and found the pipes were on a still. He lacked tools to fix the leaks, he said, and went back to his shop to get them. When he returned federal agents seized him and he was charged with owning the liquor-making outfit.

The judge ordered him freed.

Three parking and one-way-street provisions were submitted to Public Safety Director James M. Clark yesterday as recommendations for 60-day trial periods by City Traffic Engineer Lewis W. McIntyre for the Better Traffic Committee.

Disposable tissues are used and destroyed—economical, no laundering

"AN ACTUAL boon to mankind," many are saying about Kleenex, the new handkerchief tissue that is replacing the ordinary, unsanitary handkerchief.

Kleenex costs so little that it is used and destroyed. Thus countless germs are destroyed, too.

The old-time handkerchief carried these germs back to your face again and again! Causing self-infection during colds. It infected clothing, purses, laundry bags—because germs live in handkerchiefs for days.

Softer than handkerchiefs

Kleenex is not only safer. It is gentler, softer, more absorbent. Kleenex is wonderfully soothing during colds and hay fever. Children like it. Office workers find these disposable tissues convenient and clean.

Kleenex costs less than having handkerchiefs laundered—let alone the cost of buying them.

You'll find Kleenex at drug, dry goods and department stores, in packages at 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00. It has many other uses: for removing cold cream; for manicuring; for the nursery; for polishing spectacles or crystal.

Bacteriological Tests Show:

1. That handkerchiefs used by persons having colds may contain as many as 4,170,000 bacteria per handkerchief.

2. That organisms representative of those associated with colds, when impregnated upon linen and rinsed in boiling water and soap water, were not killed nor appreciably inhibited from growing.

KLEENEX Disposable TISSUES

Make this test yourself

"That new Humidor Pack does make a big difference."

"You actually can hear the difference."

That's the kind of conversation that's going on everywhere about Camels.

Wherever you turn you hear men and women talking about the big advantages of the new Humidor Pack.

And every day, thousands of smokers are turning to Camels simply because they have found that the Camel blend of choice Turkish and mellow Domestic tobaccos protected by this germ-proof, moisture-proof, dust-proof air-seal actually gives them a superior cigarette.

If you haven't discovered these advantages, make this simple test for your own information.

First, take a fresh Camel from the Humidor Pack, light it and inhale its mild, fragrant smoke. Note how cool it is on your throat, how free from parch or bite or burn.

Next, light any other cigarette. As you draw in the smoke, note how brackish and flat it is, when compared with your factory-fresh Camel.

Evaporation that robs other cigarettes of their moisture cannot steal away the goodness of Camels. For the Humidor Pack keeps them always in factory-fresh condition.

After you have made this test, after you have discovered how much better Camels really are, then go back to your old brand—if you can.

Should a Mother Retire From Life at 40?

Should mother do a fade-out at 40?

Missis B.'s youngsters think she should. Of course they don't put it just that way. "You've worked so hard to raise us," they argue, "and now you're entitled to a rest. Do stop working dawdling, and take things easy and let us take care of you."

Which, you must admit, listens lovely. But 'tis plain to be seen that they think Dear Mamma is a Has-Been and Missis B., being a spunky lady, refuses to believe it.

MOTHER UNDECIDED

"Take it easy? Why should I?" she cries. "For the first time in my life I'm footfree. Now I can go ahead on my own and live my life as I choose. If. Yet the children think I scorn through. Shall I accept their verdict—stop fighting? Or shall I make a fresh start, try to make some of my dreams come true? Which would you advise her to do?

"Dear Sally Martin:

"Although it seems as though most of your articles are for young girls and boys and I am a woman of 40, I am coming to you for advice. All my life I've made decisions for others but now, when I need to make one for myself, I don't seem able to. I hope you can help me. This is what is troubling me.

"I have four children—two daughters married to good, hard-working boys and two younger sons who are just starting to take care of themselves financially. In order to raise these children I had to work hard and undergo many hardships as did they.

YOUTHFUL SPIRIT

"Now, my eldest daughter, whom I came to visit several months ago, and her husband insist that I stay on with them. They say I have battled with the world long enough and am entitled to a rest. But in the first place, I don't believe in making a third with a young couple (I had a mother-in-law myself once) and in the second place, they're poor and I know that one more to feed makes a difference, and, third, I don't feel old enough yet to settle down. There's the rub.

"In the past year, however, I am losing my youthful appearance and beginning to look middle-aged. Gray hairs are beginning to shine through the black. But still my spirit seems as youthful as ever. However, the present economic upheaval has taken away the work with which I have always supported myself and my family. Now I am at a loss to know what to do. I really would love to meet and marry some nice, worth-while man who would make a cozy home for and with me. When the kiddies were small I had to put all my energy and thought into the battle to make a living and could not think of remarriage. And no man would have wanted to take on such a responsibility, anyway.

"Where I am I have no opportunities for social life. We are living in a very narrow, painfully uninteresting way. So I don't know really what to do. Can you or your readers give me advice? I would be so thankful for it. Please do help me soon. I'll be looking.

MRS. B."

What'll you do, sister?

Hang on to that pep and ambition of yours and keep out in the current. You're far too young yet and have too much energy to be put on the shelf to rest, or rust, no matter how kindly or lovingly the offer is made by those generous youngsters of yours, or to be happy there if you tried it.

NEW LIFE AHEAD

If you'll dig in and go after it you can open up a whole new life for yourself. For the first time in years your life is really your own. Think what an adventure you can make of it if you will! Go after it, lady!

That's my hunch. Many a woman over 40 is acting on that hunch and living more richly than she ever did before. But truth compels me to admit to every woman over 40 who is enjoying life there are a thousand who are putting up a terrible wheeze. Must this be?

Is a woman over 40 "finished"? Must she put her dreams away, say goodby to adventures, settle down to drab, rocking chair years? I don't believe it! I believe the woman of 40, who has lived vigorously and gallantly, is at her best. Her complexion may be a bit weather-beaten and her waist a trifle out-size. But she has more sense in her brain, more tolerance in her heart and more power in her punch than ever before. The best of life is yet to come for her, if she has the sense to see it. And the highway is clearer before her than it ever has been before in human history.

But perhaps you don't agree. Maybe you think that ladies of 40 should take the count? If so, why—and what's your evidence? Let's hear.

Fay King Advises Girl Not to Let Slight Age Difference Prevent Marriage

By FAY KING

I have a letter asking my advice.

The writer is very much in love with a man five years younger than she is.

She hesitates to marry him on this account though he is as much in love with her.

It is ridiculous for them to let this difference of a few years keep them apart.

Age is not so much a matter of years as of spirit, temperament and mind.

She might marry an older man and be miserable.

True love and perfect understanding are linked w Eternity—not birthdays.

I say to them marry—and may you live happily forever after.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

"Merry Christmas!"—and Activities Start.

"Merry Christmas, Mums!"

"Merry Christmas, Auntie Madge!"

I wakened in that wondering haze between dreams and full consciousness. The last words I had heard before I had gone to sleep had been Dicky's whispered "Merry Christmas, Sweetheart!" and they blended for an instant with the new tones before I recognized the shrill excited voices of Junior and Roderick. Then Katherine's soft voice sounded with them.

"May they go down for their stockings? I don't want to have them awaken anyone else."

"We're awake!" came a boyish rumble from the room where Roderick's older brothers were supposed to be sleeping.

"We'll let you older youngsters know when it's time to get up," she said.

"These lads will take several minutes for their stockings."

"Give me five seconds more," I told her, and on the fifth, I opened the door having donned bathrobe and slippers.

"I'll take them down," I told Katherine, "and tuck them in again. That will give you a chance to get dressed."

Their stockings were crammed to the brim. Mother Graham and my father, doting grandparents if ever such there be, had attended to that part of the Christmas preparations, and I knew what my next step must be.

"Promise me you won't look into the stockings until I come and tell you you may," I said to the boys. "You won't have to wait but a minute or two after you get into bed."

On their promise, I left them toiling up the stairs, carefully carrying their laden stockings, and ran up ahead of them, tapping first at my mother-in-law's door and then at my father's. Both of them needed no second summons.

They followed me into the room where Junior and Roderick were scrambling into bed, tugging their Christmas stockings with them, and the boys squealed with delight at seeing them.

"Just keep them in bed until Katherine's ready for them," I said in a low voice to my mother-in-law, and she nodded even as she looked askance at my bathrobe and slippers.

"You'll have to hurry and get dressed," she said disapprovingly. "Everybody else is up."

I did not dispute her although I was sure that Dicky, Harry, Noel, Lillian and Mary were probably still asleep. But my mother-in-law, in her own estimation, is the Douglas whose seat, wherever she may be, is the head of the table, and I knew that it behooved me to rouse the sleepers and get our Christmas procession under way without further delay.

Katherine agreed with me as she dressed with more than her usual celerity.

"Get into your clothes," she said, "and I'll run down and see about the fires. No," as to our ears came the sound of rattling stove lids and furnace doors opening and shutting, "I'm saved that trouble. Jim and Katie are on the job. There will be blazing fires ready for us. Are their tables covered?"

"Yes, Katie asked me to see to them. They're as bad as Junior and the rest in their zest for 'surprises'!"

"I don't know anybody around this house who isn't!" she retorted slyly, then her eyes, apparently clear of trouble, met mine.

"I'm all over my doldrums and ready to enjoy the day," she said, and though I heartily exclaimed, "I'm so glad," and kissed her, I was sure that her heartache and loneliness were not cured, only sternly banished that she might not dampen the joy of the rest of us.

"It won't take me long to dress," I assured her.

"I'll knock at all the doors and rouse every last person," she said, and I heard her cheery voice calling "Merry Christmas! Get ready for the procession," as I hurried into my clothing.

And then before a quarter of an hour had gone by, we formed into a procession at the top of the stairs, as we do every Christmas at the farmhouse, only upon this morning there were so many more added to our family that the length of the line was doubled.

Junior and Roderick came first, under solemn oath not to break ranks until we all were downstairs, in the living room. Next to them came Henry and William, and after them Dicky's mother and my father, that they might see the first burst of rapture upon the part of the children. Then Mary, Noel, Marion, Katherine, Harry, Lillian, Dicky and I crowded down, while in the darkened living room Jim and Katie waited, according to directions, and as Junior and Roderick eagerly parted the curtains, the Christmas tree sprang into bloom.

The Table Oilcloth

If you use oilcloth on your kitchen table it is well to invest in four brass corners that may be put on after the new oilcloth is tacked down. They present a nice appearance besides preventing the oilcloth from wearing out at the corners long before the rest is worn.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The "Expected Thing"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A couple were married last week. I did not receive an invitation to the wedding as I am not acquainted with the bride and I've met the groom only a few times. When they return from the honeymoon they will be given a reception. Should I accept, and if so, do you agree with me that I should buy a gift? My mother says that I shouldn't go if I cannot give them a gift. The reception will be at a hall.

GIRL READER.

If the groom's sister is the hostess of the reception, issues the invitations, I see no reason why you should not accept. And I see no reason either why you should take a present to the party. Of course if you find out that this is the expected thing to do, then I advise you to take a gift, but since you were not invited to the wedding, a wedding gift is not taken for granted or, I should think, expected at a post-wedding-reception.

Bride's Day

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

There is to be a wedding in our family and "A" claims that the mother and father of the bride arrange things to suit themselves as they are paying for the wedding. "B" says that the bride and groom do as they please and the parents just pay.

Kindly explain this to me in your column, as I find a lot of help in it. MOTHER.

This is putting the matter rather bluntly, but "B" is really right. The wedding day is the Bride's Day, and she usually is allowed . . . . within reason . . . . to have her plans carried out as she wishes them. Of course, if she is, as we hope she is, a girl of taste and judgment and devotion to her parents, she will naturally wish to adapt her plans to their budget-possibilities. In other words, insofar as they can, they should try to carry out her dreams to her own wedding, but she should be curbed in her demands, if she needs be.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

To make the fingers flexible, exercise them. Spread them to the limit; close slowly until the finger ends rest in the palms of the hands. Cold cream the knuckles every night and massage thoroughly.

When selecting the gorgeous new lid for the warm days, make an effort to find a becoming straw model that will provide ventilation for the scalp and hair. In warm weather, the scalp exudes considerable oil and much perspiration, and this condition is stimulated when the hat is snug of heavy material. Give your hair the air; it likes it.

Fruits are not high in nutritive value, but they are rich in important elements that are necessary for the health and well-being of the human body. Orange juice and pears are helpful in treatment of constipation. Bananas and alligator pears are good for the little slimpy gal who would put on weight and those curves that are so charming now that the nipped-in waist line has been revived.

Natural animation is the best eye brightener. Turn a deaf ear to girls who suggest liquids dropped into the eyes to impart brilliancy. The eye is too delicate a piece of machinery to be treated casually. It likes to do its own washing and oiling, and needs no chemical polish.

Skinny girls who would have curves should eat raisins that carry 100 calories to the ounce and contain iron, which is helpful in the process of building anatomical forces. After each meal, the little slimps should drink one glass of milk and cream, half-and-half.

Exposure of the forehead, with hair brushed straight back, is a fine and elegant idea when the forehead is flawless. The off-the-face coiffure and chapeau are not for the faded sweetie whose skin surface no longer shows the smooth freshness of youth. No need of pulling a wad of hair down to the eyes; a few love locks will suffice, or a light fringe. Either arrangement will hide away the tracks of time.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Trachoma Is Result of Neglect

Neglect in personal hygiene is most undesirable. As a rule, such negligence will cause disease and it always results in some ailment.

Dr. Copeland

This disease is chronic inflammation of the lining membrane of the upper and lower eyelids. It is highly contagious and may be very serious.

When the condition is allowed to remain untreated, scars form. These scars contract and deform the eyelids. The eyelashes become turned in, scratch the eye-ball and prepare the way for ulcers of the cornea.

Often a false membrane may form over the eyeball producing marked impairment in the vision. If treated at an early stage, no complications result.

This disease is very common in China, Japan, Egypt and Russia. For some reason it is prevalent among the American Indians. It is occasionally found in the southern and midwestern parts of the United States. It is prevalent in the poorer sections of all large cities.

Since it is more common abroad than in this country all immigrants are examined for this disease. Those found with trachoma are deported.

Trachoma is extremely infectious. It is a serious menace when many persons are huddled together under unsanitary conditions. Lack of fresh air, sunlight, good food and personal cleanliness aid in preparing the way for the spread of the disease.

At one time trachoma was very common in orphan asylums, poor houses and other similar institutions. Due to present knowledge of the need of fresh air, sunlight and other hygienic measures, this disease is now seen only occasionally in North America.

Please remember that persistent redness of the eyelids, discharge from the eyes or other discomfort requires medical attention. Do not neglect your eyes. They are very precious and cannot be replaced.

MRS. F. S. R. Q.—Is it possible to have what is known as an over-active thyroid without having goitre, or are the terms synonymous? What is the treatment? Is diet of any special advantage?

A.—Over-activity of the thyroid gland is called goitre. The treatment depends largely upon the extent and seriousness of the disturbance. No.

Household Hints

After darning children's socks fold them together instead of rolling them, as rolling stretches them at the ribbed tops and causes them to wrinkle and fall down.

A heavy rug at the bottom of the cellar steps is an essential article if you wish to keep the kitchen linoleum clean. All soot from the cellar can be scraped off one's shoes before starting up the stairs.

When mayonnaise has separated there is only one way to get it together again. Start all over again with another yolk, add a little oil to it, and when it has thickened, very gradually beat in the curdled dressing until it is all blended into the new.

To wash dress shields use lukewarm, soapy water and a teaspoon of baking soda; do not rub soap directly on the shields, but on a small brush, and brush both sides of the shields vigorously with warm water; rinse in lukewarm water and dry in a shady, airy place.

Trim the old whisk broom to a point in the center and it will do excellent service in removing dust from the corners of a room or stairs.

To renew a one-color rug which is worn in spots, mix a little water with a package of dye of the same shade as the rug and apply to the faded parts with a stiff brush.

Furniture movers, on cleaning days, will be grateful if the castors have been oiled. An occasional oiling of the castors makes the furniture much easier to move, and housecleaning will not prove such a tiresome task.

To remove sewing-machine oil spots wet the spots with spirits of turpentine and wash out with cold water and toilet soap (hot water will set them). Or rub spots with chalk at once, leave for a short time then brush and the spots will disappear. For machine oil on silk cover freely with cornstarch or talcum powder, leave on two days and then brush it out.

SOUTHPAW TURNS TABLES ON GIANTS

THERE ARE SIGNS that Larry French is going to do a neat little job of table turning against the Giants this season. Last year the McGrawmen took him for four out of five games, but the debate is assuming a different complexion for 1931. The Pirates and Giants met only twice up to today and French trimmed the New Yorkers on both occasions, following up a 10-inning 3 to 2 victory of May 15 with his masterful exhibition yesterday, in which he would have registered a shutout but for a leak in his support. In a total of 19 innings he held the Giants to two earned runs.

Larry French

Larry also got revenge in another direction yesterday, as the victory gave him the first decision he ever gained over Bill Walker, New York slabman. The rival southpaws did not clash in 1929, but hooked up in three games last season and Walker was the winner every time. Things just wouldn't break right for French against the Gothamites in 1930, but evidently a different story is to be written this year.

FREDDIE LINDSTROM appeared to be perfectly at home in right field in his first Pittsburgh appearance since being turned into a regular fly-chaser. He makes it look easy. Freddie goes and gets them in all directions like a gardener of long experience, handles ground balls, of course, in exceptional style by reason of his infield training, and sends the ball back in fast style with one of the best throwing arms displayed here in a long time.

Speaking of Lindstrom's great whip, Manager McGraw probably has the best-throwing outfield in the National League, as Mel Ott, in center, has an arm equaled only by that of Kiki Cuyler or Chick Hafey, and both Fred Leach and Ethan Allen, who alternate in left, carry more than ordinary power. Following Ross Young and Ott, Lindstrom keeps up a line of great throwers in New York's right field.

DESPITE RECENT REVERSES, the Pirates today were only one point below fifth place and only two games from the first division. If the club's hitting had been on a par with its pitching in the last 10 games the locals would now be striding along among the select four.

The main feature of the present going in the senior loop is being contributed by none other than the lowly Reds. In little more than a week the Howleys have won almost as many games as they captured in seven weeks previously. They have bagged seven of their last eight bouts.

IF THE BRAVES can follow up the good work they began yesterday and take another fall or two out of the Cardinals, the National League race may develop into one of the tightest jams in history. The Phils in seventh place are only six games behind the Giants in the second hole. But there is almost an equal stretch between the second-placers and the leaders. The Cards' lead of four and a half games is equal to that held by the A's in the American, notwithstanding the Mackmen's great drive in which they won 17 games in succession and 27 of their last 31 engagements.

Pete Donohue

WHEN PETE DONOHUE, released to Minneapolis, called the attention of the New York club officials to the fact that he was only about a week short of the 10-year service that would entitle him to an unconditional release, the Giant management did a sportsmanlike act and gave him his freedom.

As a result Donohue has caught on with Cleveland and is able to remain in the big show instead of going to the minors. It was to create such opportunities for slipping veterans that the 10-year rule was adopted. It often happens that a major league club, though unwilling to invest the waiver price in an old-timer, is willing to give him a job if he is a free agent.

A FEW YEARS ago more than one National League club, the Pirates included, would have been just as well satisfied if Donohue had joined the American League in the first place. From 1922 to 1926, inclusive, he won 96 games for Cincinnati, not far from an average of 20 victories per season.

Pete was a thorn in the side of the Buccaneers for several seasons, but it was against the Phillies that he made his greatest record, and a most unusual one. Losing a couple of games to them when he first came up in 1921, Donohue turned in and defeated the Quakers 20 times in succession before they broke the long streak by getting a 5-to-4 decision over him in Philadelphia on August 19, 1925.

JAMES (RED) MASON, veteran boxing manager, picks Max Schmeling to defeat Young Stribling. He writes from Chicago: "The spot at Conneaut Lake where Schmeling is training was first picked by me as a training site when I had Harry Greb matched to meet Battling Levinsky at Forbes Field some years ago. I had been there a couple of times with Johnny Ray to look it over, and decided it was just right for training purposes. I had a workout place for Greb erected on the old fair grounds and he did his road work around the half-mile race track. Well, I think it was the fight with Levinsky and the great shape he was in that gave Greb his first real prominence in the fight game. Dan Morgan, who had Levinsky at that time, wrote me a kidding letter and told me to make sure my boxer did not get hurt before the night of the battle.

"WELL, GREB came down from Conneaut in great shape and gave Levinsky quite a trimming, dropping him in the final round for a short count. So if there is any influence about a training camp for good luck or bad I'll have to string along with Schmeling as the winner in his coming fight with Stribling. Another hunch I have in connection with this fight is on the score of nationality.

"Both of Greb's parents were German, and so were their own parents before them. Now if Greb, a German, could win the world middleweight championship when I matched him with Johnny Wilson, I do not see any good reason why Schmeling, also a good German, cannot retain the heavyweight title. I am going on record as picking Schmeling as the winner over the boy from Georgia."

PROMOTERS OF THE Carnera-Redmond fistic circus scheduled for last night in Brooklyn didn't lose any time early yesterday morning in putting the show back to next Monday night when the weather man gave them an excuse.

True, the rain continued long enough to knock out Yankee-White Sox baseball game, but judging from the haste with which the fight was postponed the advance sale for the latter must have been even worse than the weather.

Maureen Orcutt

IN BEING ELIMINATED from the competition for the women's British golf championship yesterday, when she was defeated by Miss Elsie Corlett, 4 and 3, Miss Maureen Orcutt, only contender from the United States, fell a victim to the same fate that has overtaken every other American challenger for that title. It is the one British golf crown that players from this country never have succeeded in winning. The last two years Miss Glenna Collett got as far as the finals, only to be defeated there by Miss Joyce Wethered, 3 and 1, in 1929, and by Miss Diana Fishwick, 4 and 3, in 1930.

MEINE DUE TO PITCH TODAY

DAILY TO SEEK SUPPORT FOR WEAK TEAMS

By JESS CARVER

The boys in the Middle Atlantic League spent a right busy day yesterday. First, Altoona handed back its franchise to the league, which it took up when Jeannette gave up the ghost a month ago. Then President Elmer Daily announced that plans were under way to transfer the franchise held by Hagerstown to Steubenville, O., and, lastly, the Cumberland Colts were eased out of the league lead.

Late last night, after having spent most of the day dickering with various Altoona interests, President Daily broke the news that, despite the fact that the franchise had been returned, the town undoubtedly would continue to support the team, and that plans were already under way for the formation of a boosters' association, such as is in effect at Johnstown and at Wheeling, W. Va.

"No Trespassing" signs and a constable were on hand when the Altoona and Huntington clubs put in their appearance for the double bill yesterday, the Altoona Road Drivers' Association, which owns the ball park, having refused to permit any more activity until some rent was paid. President Daily put the fix on and the games were played. Altoona winning the first, 6 to 1, and dropping the second, 8 to 1.

Meanwhile, the race for first place tightened up to ultra-Scotch proportions. Charleston's Senators knocked off Johnstown, 11-10 and 10-7, and eased into the lead as Cumberland lost another decision to Beckley, 6 to 4.

Scottdale, in third place, remained on the tails of the leaders by defeating Hagerstown, which is about ready to follow in the footsteps of Jeannette and do a fadeout, 15 to 3.

CADDIE TRIAL DATE SET

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

While the caddies are preparing to play in preliminary rounds to qualify teams for the event, the fourth annual William Randolph Hearst Trophy tournament for juniors, to be held at the Schenley Park municipal links, Tuesday, June 30, under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, is not purely a competition for bag-toters.

It is a junior golf tournament open to all amateur golfers, 19 years of age or under, who are not attending institutions of learning above preparatory school grades, and they must be amateurs as defined by the U. S. G. A. rules.

A boy may receive money for caddying until his eighteenth birthday — but if he caddies for one day for money after that he is professionalized. Therefore, caddies 17 years of age and under are eligible.

Caddiemaster Harry Kelly, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, announced yesterday he would qualify his team next Monday morning, and more than 100 caddies from that club alone are expected to compete. Caddiemaster Al Burton, of the Fox Chapel Golf Club, may hold his qualification round next Monday, while Caddiemaster Harry Zimmerman, of the Wildwood Country Club, is negotiating with officials of the club in an effort to qualify his boys.

Bill Stuhlfire will send his ace, Eddie Imhoff, to the mound in an effort to keep the Rieck nine on top.

TITLE AT STAKE

Should Riecks cop this game, the stage will be all set for the meeting with Reliance next week. The clubs have to meet twice. The first-half championship will hinge upon the outcome of these games.

While Riecks are staging their fight at Magee Field, Reliance will be tackling the Linwood club in the West Penn circuit. Seeing that the Lincoln avenue team is the most improved outfit in the loop, it is likely the Lifers will have a battle on its hands at the Homewood playgrounds.

UMPIRE CLARKE — THIRD BASEMAN VERGEZ

Vergez, of the Giants, thought Lloyd Waner's bunt in the third inning at Forbes Field yesterday, with French already on base, would roll foul, but it remained fair, as the picture shows, and Bennett followed with another safe bunt and the bases were filled with none out and the Pirates scored three runs in the frame and the game went blooie for the Giants, who lost the series opener, 5-1.

BEDNAR SENT TO TEXAS

The Pirate roster has been reduced to 26 men, one over the limit that must be met by next Monday and Pitcher Andy Bednar is back again in the minors.

The husky Nebraskan was released under a 48-hour recall clause to Fort Worth in the Texas League yesterday, left last night for the South and will report to his new club today.

Bednar was obtained from the McCook team of the Nebraska State League last year, taken to training camp and then farmed out to Wichita in the Western League. He was recalled this spring, spent another period of drill at Paso Robles and remained with the Bucs until yesterday.

Bednar reported to Manager Ens this spring, toting several pounds of unnecessary flesh. The Texas sun is expected to dissolve some of this before Andy returns to the Pirate fold.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The Pirates required a long time to make their offensive co-ordinate with the brilliant pitching that has been on display for many weeks, but they eventually blended the two, and the ambitious Giants had to be the victims as the Men of McGraw made their season debut before Pittsburgh fans.

Buccaneer batsmen couldn't lay away a thing while the Braves were in town, and they were just about as negligible against the Phillies, but all the while their sharpshooters carried on like champions, and as a result they were able to break even in the fights with the Tribe and the Quakers.

But the appearance of the New Yorkers marked a return of some of the power that had strayed away. All of this tends to the belief that the Freebooters gave a shellacking to some unfortunate pitcher yesterday, and this is hardly true, but they did step out with a resourceful attack to support the sparkling slab effort reeled off by the youthful Larry French. Larry held the hard-hitting Giants to three hits, and the Buccos won, 5 to 1.

MEINE TO HURL

The second game of what should prove a highly interesting series is on for this afternoon. Manager Ens has Heinie Meine groomed for the encounter. McGraw plans to throw up more lefthand defense breastworks, despite the fact that the Oaklanders drove a wedge through the southpaw hurling of yesterday. Carl Hubbell will be on the mound for the Polo Grounders.

Laughing Larry showed Pittsburgh folks how he performs against the Giants when he is in hostile territory. The Coast League graduate has pitched some of his greatest ball at the Polo Grounds, he winning a 3 to 2 verdict in 10 innings at the home of the Giants in the only contest the two clubs have staged there this year. Larry has been more consistent on the road than at home, but he had something in the way of a treat as

Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

WASHINGTON, June 11.—There may be a depression going on, but in most ball parks you've got to keep the turnstiles lubricated or they'll burn out a connecting rod. In plenty towns the Saturday and Sunday attendance is so crowded the ticket scalpers are selling knotholes in the fence. Even in Boston on a Sunday hordes pay to watch the Red Sox rather than look at the other Colonial relics they can see free. Say, since this new ball came along, you see a stolen base about as often as a two-base bunt. Today the best base running is in the bleachers where the peanut vendors can always stretch one bag into three.

HENDRICK'S PLAY FEATURES REDS' SPURT

CUBS DEFEAT PHILS; BRAVES, NATS WIN

Associated Press.

Harvey Hendrick, the 33-year-old veteran who wasn't good enough to play regularly with the Brooklyn Robins this spring, has become a ball of fire since his recent sale to the Cincinnati Reds. His batting average is topped only by that of Babe Ruth.

Inspired by the big first baseman's great .386 clip at the plate, Dan Howley's pupils have won 7 of their last eight games and the invaders from the East and are beginning to make threatening gestures from their cellar retreat. Hendrick's big bat has helped them win as many games in eight days as they won in the first six weeks before he joined them.

REDS UPSET ROBINS

Hendrick's former mates, the Robins, were the victims of the latest Cincinnati outbreak. While the veteran Eppa Rixey turned them back yesterday, his mates pounded Phelps and Moore for a 10-to-3 victory in the series opener.

The defeat knocked the Robins back into a tie with Pittsburgh for fifth place, 10 games from the top, as the Pirates subdued the New York Giants, 5 to 1. Larry French turned in a brilliant performance, holding the Giants to three scattered singles.

The Giants in turn dropped into a tie for second place with the Chicago Cubs, who stopped the Phillies, 3 to 0. Charley Root allowed only four hits, scattered over as many innings.

RABBIT STARS

Rabbit Maranville, veteran Braves shortstop, enjoyed a field day against the St. Louis Cardinals. He banged a triple and three singles and scored five runs as the leaders went down, 13 to 4. Tom Zachary went the route, while Paul Derringer, who previously had won five straight, was driven out in the sixth.

The Washington Senators finally managed to gain a little ground on the Athletics. While rain prevented hostilities in three other American League cities, Walt Johnson's men took their opener from the Cleveland Indians, 9 to 4, cutting Philadelphia's lead to four and a half games.

Miss Quier Misses Chance for Title

ROSLYN, N. Y., June 11 (AP).—Miss Edith Quier, of Reading, Pa., had the women's eastern championship in her grasp with only two holes left to play yesterday but tossed it away by taking 11 strokes, seven over women's par, on the 363-yard seventeenth hole. Miss Helen Hicks and Mrs. D. C. Hurd tied at 363 and will play off for the title today.

PAUL HITS HOMER

The Waner boys, Fred Bennett and Adam Comorosky were the batting stars of the contest. Brother Paul walloped a resounding homer into the upper deck of the rightfield stands in the fifth round with Bennett aboard. This drive gave the home team a comparatively safe lead, it having picked up its other tallies in a fine drive of the third.

It was French who opened the winning attack by the way. The game was scoreless, and Bill Walker, another cleanout southpaw, seemed to be in possession of a lot of stuff. Larry smeared one to center to start the third and Brother Lloyd dumped a bunt on the third base line. Johnny Vergez waited for the tap to roll foul, but it stayed in.

Bennett then pushed a bunt between Walker and Vergez, this fine effort filling up the bases for Brother Paul. Walker was good enough to whiff the de luxe hitter in the clinch, but the strain was so great he walked Capt. Traynor to force in one run. Comorosky then injected a winning hit when he singled to right to score two more.

Joe Heving relieved Walker in the third. Harold Schumacher and Tiny Chaplin also doing a stunt on the mound. Schumaker came to the Giants from St. Lawrence College and had no previous professional experience.

Tommy Thevenow returned to the Pirate lineup, the shortstop playing brilliant ball afield.

Gower, Syracuse Oarsman, Crippled

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 11.—(AP.)—Between the customary crop of last-minute injuries and Coach Bill Haines' uncertainty as to the No. 6 oar in his Massachusetts Tech varsity eight, college crew coaches are finding plenty of worries in the last few days before the Intercollegiate Rowing Association regatta next Tuesday.

The vacancy in the M. I. T. shell was made when Louis Evans resigned.

Byron Gower, bow in one of Syracuse's two varsity crews, the Lombardi-stroked combination developed a kink in his back yesterday and was unable to row. Coach Ten Eyck was uncertain as to when he might recover.

Mass. to Permit 12, 15-Round Bouts

BOSTON, June 11.—(AP.)—Fifteen-round championship boxing bouts in this state were legalized yesterday when Gov. Joseph B. Ely signed the new boxing bill, which will become effective in 90 days. The bill also will allow 12-round bouts for New England championship contests.

SPORT VIGNETTES

The latest in the way of sport similes is Bill Corum's "As disappointed as the greyhound that caught the mechanical rabbit." . . . Local boxing fans are watching with interest the campaign of George Posipanka, erstwhile Homestead bricklayer, and better known as George Panka, to come back among the heavyweights as a sparring partner of Max Schmeling. . . . 'Tis rumored he'll be on the Schmeling-Young Stribling title bout card in Cleveland, July 3 . . . Tracy Cox, of Indianapolis, has boxed the veteran Midget O'Dowd three times. . . . He lost the first bout, drew in the second and won by a technical knockout in two rounds the other night. . . . That's making progress.

Tom Connolly, who has just been made chief of staff of the American League umpires, never played a game of baseball . . . He was born in Ireland and played some jolly cricket in England before coming over here, if you really want the lowdown on him . . . Georgie Bretsch, the North Side welterweight, who boxes on the card at Hickey Park tonight, has been on the sidelines due to a bad right duke since his rough battle with Jackie Herman in the only show held in the Etna Elks' hall last fall . . . He's one of the most satisfying of the local preliminary boxers, giving plenty of action and hitting hard at all times.

Dormont is claiming Al Mamaux again, now that he is managing Newark toward an International League pennant . . . The little birdies are chirping that it won't be long before the Curley faction in New York and the Bowser clique in Boston will kiss and make up one happy wrestling family, and that Frank Wiener, chairman of the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission, will become the Judge Landis of the mat sport at a fancy salary . . . Just what does Primo Carnera mean when he says he will go BACK to wrestling for a living if he doesn't soon cease to be the center of court suits over his boxing bouts?

Johnny Buckley, the Boston manager of boxers, is virtually starving to death these days, with only 15 fighters in his stable, including Jack Sharkey, the uncrowned heavyweight champion, and Ernie Schaaf, Paul Cavalier, Henry Lamar, Al Morro and Jack McCarthy, other heavies . . . Schaaf received $7,800 for his recent one-round knockout victory over Jim Maloney in Boston . . . The real name of Herman Follins, former Ambridge lightweight, who recently scored two victories in less than a week in New Jersey rings, where he is a big card, is Hermano Follino and he is an Italian . . . Follins, by the way, will be brought back here soon for a windup with a good opponent . . . Meanwhile they're talking of a bout for him with Lightweight Champion Tony Canzoneri in Newark.

They're now touting Ben Chapman, the Yankee star, as the best base-runner in the American League . . . Johnny Risko, who has fought 'em both, picks Young Stribling to win the decision hands down when he meets Max Schmeling for the heavy title in his Cleveland town . . . John always did claim Maxie knocked him out with a lucky punch in the battle that gave the German his first real fame . . . You wouldn't think it to look at them, but Johnny Montebano, the boxer of Braddock, is four years older than his big brother, Carl, the middleweight, who is not yet 19.

Emmett Rocco, the Ellwood City Italian heavyweight, says he went in for boxing because he thought it would be an easier way of making a living than working in the tube mills . . . He supports a large family with his fists and takes the best of care of himself physically . . . A kid brother is a good football guard now ready for college.—HARRY KECK.

JOE KIRKWOOD SECOND AT DEAUVILLE

DEAUVILLE, France, June 11 (AP.)—Joe Kirkwood, who finished seventh in the French Open golf championship yesterday, returned to the Deauville links today to score a 72 and take second place at the end of the first round of the 36-hole competition for the Masthaum Cup and prizes amounting to 50,000 francs (about $2,000).

Leading the international field was Pierre Alsiguren, of the Nivelle Club, who scored a 67 to tie the course record set yesterday by Tomas Genta, the Argentine, and equaled in the final round by Aubrey Boomer, winner of the open.

Boomer had a 74 today and Genta took a 78. He withdrew from the tournament after posting that score, saying he was too fatigued to continue.

Coast Boxer's Death Ruled Accidental

PORTLAND, Ore., June 11.—(INS.)—The Portland Boxing Commission will take no action in the death of Stanley Sargent, Vancouver, Wash., who died 14 hours after he was knocked out by Pete Meyers, San Francisco middleweight.

Chairman Frank J. Lonergan held the death was accidental. The boxer's head hit the floor with great force in the fifth round and he died without recovering consciousness despite an emergency operation.

CHRISTNER STOPPED

DETROIT, June 11.—(AP.)—Tony Galento, Orange, (N. J.) heavyweight, knocked out K. O. Christner, of Akron, O., in the eighth of a scheduled 10-round bout here last night. MISS ORCUTT'S CONQUEROR BEATEN

PORTMARNOCK, Ireland, June 11 (AP.)—Three English women, and one Scotswoman advanced to the semi-final round of the British women's golf championship today, among them the ruling favorite to take Miss Diana Fishwick's crown, Enid Wilson.

Miss Wilson defeated Elsie Corlett, a fellow countrywoman and conqueror of the American threat, Miss Maureen Orcutt, in easy fashion, 5 and 4. The deadly putting Miss Corlett had on display yesterday to defeat Miss Orcutt, 4 and 3, was lost overnight, and she was no match for the English champion.

Wands Morgan defeated Miss P. Jameson, one of the two Irishwomen, 6 and 5, and Molly Gourlay defeated Miss Dorothy Pimm, the other hope of the Emerald Isle, 3 and 2. It was Miss Pimm who put out Miss Fishwick in the third round yesterday.

The other semi-finalist is the highlander, Mrs. R. Greenless, who defeated Mrs. R. O. Porter, 6 and 4.

Miss Wilson will meet Miss Gourlay in one semi-final match, and Mrs. Greenless will play Miss Morgan in the other.

A.'S TO RETIRE ED COLLINS

PHILADELPHIA, June 11.—(AP.)—After a quarter of a century as an active player in the American League, Edward Trowbridge Collins, king of second basemen in his day, will be retired to the inactive list on June 15.

On that day Connie Mack, of the Athletics, will have to reduce his active list of players to 25 and Collins, it has been decided, will step into the inactive list.

Eddie, who has not been very active in the last two years, however, will remain with the world champions as captain, coach and adviser and as right hand man to the tall tutor of the A's.

He can be made an active player any time Connie wishes, but it is not likely that he will ever be called into the A's batting order.

Ed, Billy Jacobs In Quarter-Finals

BALTIMORE, June 11.—(AP.)—Four seeded players have fought their way into the quarter-finals of the Maryland state tennis tournament, while two other seeded racqueters were eliminated.

Eddie Jacobs, Baltimore, playing for the University of Pittsburgh in defense of his title, beat Malcolm Oates, of Baltimore, seeded tenth, 6-2, 6-2, and Ted Easton, of Stanford University, seeded fourth, defeated Fred Sendel, 10-8 and 6-4.

Billy Jacobs, Eddie's brother and playing for the University of Pittsburgh also, entered the quarter-finals by beating Eric Jacobson, Baltimore, 6-1, 7-9 and 6-3.

PITT LEADER VICTOR WITH FINE 72

Sam Parks, Jr., the University of Pittsburgh captain and the Highland Country Club star, rapidly is battering his way into the most select of golfing circles. Yesterday he rang up his third outstanding triumph of the year when he won the second P. G. A. one-day tourney over his home links. He won the first event of its kind for the year two weeks ago and then led all the amateurs home in the national open qualifying test at Oakmont on Monday.

Parks scored two final rounds of 36 to land a 72 yesterday. Wright McClure, of Chartiers Heights, was second, shooting a 75.

Parks' handicap of 3 gave him a low net of 69, with McClure winding up with 67 for first place. W. L. Thunhurst, of Edgewood, and Bill Mercer, of Shannopin, both had 77-7—70. Knox Young, of Highland, landed a 75-4—71, and Maurice Le Bosquet, another Highlander, a 75-3—72.

In the match play against par competition, under seven-eighths handicap, A. B. McGrew and J. E. Canning, both of Stanton Heights, teamed up to finish 9 up. Bill Mercer, of Shannopin, and J. W. Robinson, of Alcoma, finished second, 8 up.

A field of 250 started out in the P. G. A. event, nearly half of which failed to turn in cards.

BOBBY JONES' Lessons in Golf

American Amateur and Open and Former British Amateur and Open Champion.

Bobby Jones

It seems to me that a good many average golfers overlook entirely the fact that there is a very definite purpose to be accomplished by the backswing. On any golf course on any day you may see players who snatch the club back or draw it back or lift it back, but you rarely see one who actually swings it back. They think hard enough about how they hit the ball, but they don't give much attention to the other necessary matter of getting into position so that they can hit properly.

We all have heard of the importance of a slow backswing. So has the average golfer. But it is possible to find a good many examples demonstrating that "slow" is the only thought in the mind of the owner of the swing when he is taking the club back. He will lift the club up painfully and so slowly that both he and you will hold your breath in tense expectancy. And the blow falls. Having gone back what he thinks is a proper distance, the poor man literally jumps at the ball—and usually dashes his club into the ground behind it.

BACKSWING IMPORTANT

Now, we call the complete act of hitting a golf ball a swing, and we give the name of backswing to that part of the motion which takes the club from the position of address to the top of the swing. I think the "swing" part of these terms ought to be underscored, at least in the mind of the player. There is no other word which so nobly signifies what the thing ought to be—not a snatch or jerk, or even a speak of slow-motion, but a SWING—easy, comfortable, unhurried, smooth, and yet not slowed down to the point of absurdity. The position at the top of the swing is important, but the player has little chance to place himself in a proper one. His only chance is to swing into it.

There can be no question that one of the things which worries the average player is his fear of swinging back too far. A number of earnest golfers have asked me to suggest a way to prevent or stop over-swinging. I tell them all that I don't think any backswing is too long which is not consciously stretched. Some swings are too loose and flabby. It is true, but I have never seen a swing which needed to be hauled in.

LONG STROKE BEST

In my own case, for instance, my backswing goes noticeably past the horizontal position at the top—even in playing an iron club normally without forcing it, and I never get into trouble because I take the club back too far. On the contrary, my concern is always that I do not stop it too soon, for then I am likely to snatch it down and lose the control of an evenly accelerated stroke.

A long backswing gives plenty of time for gathering speed before striking the ball. Starting from a full top position, it is never necessary to hurry the downswing, and there is a manner which will not disturb the balance or make necessary the least abnormal effort. And coming down, if the swing has been long enough, the player realizes that he need not be in any hurry to start hitting. This is precisely the reason that the average spectator marvels at the ease with which the expert attains prodigious distances. The swing of the expert is free from the spasmodic effort of hitting which is characteristic of the method of the club. He gives himself plenty of room, and he spreads his effort over a greater range.

Battling Gizzy, the local lightweight whirlwind, will not box Sammy Doerfman, of New York, in the main bout at the Meyers Bowl, North Bardodock, next Monday night.

And

Neither will Frankie Genaro, of New York, claimant of the world flyweight title, go through with his match with Jimmy Thomas, local young Negro star, originally billed for Hickey Park, Millvale, tonight, and postponed until next Thursday night.

Gizzy is in the Passavant Hospital suffering from a leg injury received in training, while Genaro who first asked for a week's postponement of his bout with Thomas, recent victor over Willie Davies in the same ring, now learns he is suffering from neuritis. He cannot use his left arm in training.

BRANNON TO SUB

The Meyers Bowl has signed Eddie Brannon, local Negro lightweight, who recently lost a close match with Gizzy at Hickey Park, to sub for the latter against Doerfman. Meanwhile Promoter John Herron of Hickey Park is trying to match Davies with Thomas for a substitute main bout next week while he tosses off an all-star card in his Millvale open-air arena tonight.

Young Rudy, of Charleroi, and Tiger Joe Randall, local Negro welterweight, will box the main bout. Meyer Prager, of Chicago, meets Ray Collins, of Erie, in the semi-final; Jack Tracey, local Negro middleweight, and Jimmy Taylor, blond Clevelander, mix in a return bout in the second event, and Ray Lyle, of Akron, and Georgie Bretsch, of the North Side, box the opener at 8:45.

Between Rounds

Frankie Bojonki and Jimmy Dean, home town rivals, box the windup of the eight-bout show, Monday night. Jimmy Mosorie, local Negro middleweight, meets Billy Bruno, of Worcester, Mass., in the six-round semi-final.

George Pianka, the Homestead heavyweight, is off the K. O. Christner-Ike McFowler card at Johnstown next Friday night. Billy Flannagan, of Braddock, and Bruno Sala, of Donora, will box the second-final. Walter Strapple, of Windber, and Jimmy Dale, formerly Judy Morace, of Charleroi, offer the second bout, and Tony Fagan, of Windber, and Charles Biozrich, of St. Michael, are in the opener.

Jimmy Reddy, of McKeesport, who boxed Jackie Johnson at Grand Rapids last night, also an appearer in Saginaw next Tuesday night and has a preliminary to a Buckskin Jackie-Jackie Horner bout at Flint, Mich., on June 25.

Whitey Whitworth wants to match his Billy Brent, Negro middleweight, with any of the boys in his division here. He also has a scrap with Jack Hernandez, who wants to box Young Rudy or Ted Yarosz, and Al Lazzone, who is after a return bout with Don Frazier. Jack Thompson, of Ohio, is another member of the stable.

Relampago Saguero, of Cuba, who boxes Tuy Phillips, former local welterweight in Chicago tonight, takes a record of 51 victories in 57 bouts. Phillips is subbing for Jackie Fields, former champion.

Southern Railroad Halts Common Dividends

NEW YORK, June 11.—Southern Railroad directors today declared a dividend of 35 cents a share on the common stock out of the remainder of unappropriated 1930 earnings, making a total of $4 a share, payable on this class of stock this year, and announced they do not contemplate the payment of any further dividends on the common stock during 1931.

A statement by the company recalled that at the meeting in December directors declared as dividends on the common stock the remainder of the income of 1929 not previously appropriated for this purpose. The total then declared was $3.65 a share, of which $2 a share was paid May 1, and $1.65 a share will be paid August 1 to stockholders of record July 1.

At the meeting held today, directors declared the regular dividend of $1.25 on the preferred stock, payable July 15, to stock of record June 22, out of 1930 earnings heretofore appropriated for that purpose.

Stock Exchange Topics

Low-priced oils are coming into more favor in some speculative quarters, although thus far without any evidence of an attempt to stage demonstrations in these shares. Something of this nature may happen in the future, however, if the market holds steady to firm. The theory is finding favor that many of the low-priced oils will benefit from mergers. A growing belief is that one solution of the oil problem is in the concentration of trade affairs into fewer hands.

An increasing number of market observers believe that the railroads will give the clue to the trend of the general list. While it is hardly likely that any material change in freight traffic will occur in the near future, the feeling is that the rails have been well liquidated and deflated. The carrier shares therefore are considered as in a good technical position to make almost immediate response to any accumulation. Any substantial improvement in the market for the carriers would spread to other groups rapidly, it is averred.

Increase in sales have been reported by interests close to Raybestos-Manhattan Company's volume showed a 10 per cent increase in May over the preceding month and June thus far also has shown satisfactory results. About 55 per cent of the company's business is done with the automobile industry and it is consistently adding customers in this branch. The remaining 45 per cent of Raybestos volume is contributed by the operations of Manhattan Rubber, which does a good business with miscellaneous manufacturing concerns.

Everything is pointing to an extremely dull summer for the steel industry, judging by the manner in which the trade papers sum up the situation. Last week brought a further contraction in mill operations to around 40 per cent of capacity, compared with 42 per cent the week before, the spring high of 57 per cent in March, and with an operating rate of around 73 per cent a year ago. Decline in automobile demand is the main force behind the slackening at the moment, and the immediate prospects for steel will depend strongly on the trend of things in the motor trade. Demand in other directions is holding fairly well, carrying the implication, according to the Iron Age, "That the irreducible minimum of requirements has been reached."

Strength in United Corporation and some of the other Eastern utilities could be traced to the showing of the weekly figures on electric power output during the week ended June 6. For the country as a whole it was shown output fell 2.9 per cent under the same week last year and 5.5 per cent below the corresponding week in 1929. But breaking the report down so that the trend in sections could be disclosed, it was found that output in the Atlantic seaboard area last week actually showed an increase of 4.4 per cent over the same week in 1930. The real basis for the lower aggregate figure was found in the form of a drop of 7.8 per cent in the output taken by the big central industrial region.

The Street is leaning more and more to the belief that the constructive side of the market is being strongly sponsored. The theory in such quarters is that powerful and determined effort is being made to maintain stocks well above the recent lows with a view to obviating any resumption of liquidation which might develop if the market fell back around last week's lows again. On frequent occasion since the recovery movement got under way it has been apparent that the bears have been unable to make any important progress on the side of lower prices. Several times the market has disclosed signs of wavering, but thus far whenever selling has threatened to make serious inroads strong buying has been quick to assert itself. Presumably the real aim of those working on the constructive side is that of keeping the market in a trading range for stocks seem to come out again on the bulges.

Distribution Problem | New York Curb Market

TRADE HELD UP BY COSTS OF DISTRIBUTION

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, June 11—The neck of the bottle which retards the free flow of trade is faulty and uneconomic distribution.

The current orgy of retail price cutting will automatically quicken the process of nautral selection among merchants, and probably the least fit will not survive.

Mr. Rukeyser

But in the larger sense the business equilibrium has been distributed because the great economies in production of recent years have not been paralleled by similar reductions in the cost of distribution.

Perhaps the most significant message given this week at the Atlantic City convention of the National Electric Light Association was the address by J. F. Owens, president of the Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company, who pointed out today:

"I may be wrong, but it seems to me that no one is making any effort to get down to what I call the 'grass roots' of our difficulties. If this is done, we very quickly find that most of our problems which seem to be the outcome of some intangible, but nevertheless very real, world-wide economic crisis, can be resolved into one very simple problem which is not new, but which, for the moment, is all dressed up in new clothes with no particular place to go, and which, therefore, is trying to go every place at once. It is the problem of distribution, which, in this country at least, is becoming more and more acute, affecting not only every man, woman and child in the United States, but throughout the world.

"The acuteness of this problem of distribution is due, very largely, to the rapidity with which our whole economic structure has changed in the past few decades.

MASS PRODUCTION

"The problems of production created by this highly developed machine are have been solved to some extent very largely because American industry has its five-year, 10-year and even 15-year programs. On the other hand, we apparently have not yet learned how to control the consequences of our machinery and our mass production—we produce the highest quality of commodities at the lowest possible unit cost and in quantities sufficient for everyone, but we just don't seem to know how to get them to the consumers in such a way they too, may benefit by the machine age. Hence, we are startled by this overnight growth of the problem of distribution."

In the next decade the genius of American executives should have free scope in the realm of distribution. A radical slash in the operating expenses of distributors would have the effect of enlarging the real income of American consumers, whose buying power needs to be stimulated, in the interests of reviving prosperity.

Japan Fears Failure Of Silver Parley

TOKIO, June 11—The Japanese government has instructed Ambassador Debuchi in Washington to inform the United States government it has definitely decided not to take the initiative in the promotion of an international conference on the silver question, fearing the situation might be aggravated in case of failure.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, June 11—Grains went lower early today, influenced by additional moisture in Canadian drought regions, especially Southern Saskatchewan, and by production of more. There were also Liverpool reports of increased offerings of Argentine and Australian wheat. Opening ¾ cent lower, wheat afterward held near to the initial limits. Corn started ⅝@½ cent off and subsequently showed but little trading power.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Irregular — Local Stocks Move Up

STOCK MARKET MOVEMENTS IRREGULAR

Heaviness of Leaders Halt Active Buying, List Rises As Pressure Is Lifted

NEW YORK, June 11.—(A.P.)—Stocks fluttered irregularly in a professional market today, unable to break out of a trading rut either on the frequent dips or recoveries. Group movements were indecisive. Volume continued very light.

Heaviness of United States Steel, Westinghouse and a few other prominent issues checked moderately active buying in the early dealings, but whenever the slight pressure was lifted the market tended to advance. Public following for an extension of the rally seemed to be definitely lacking, while the resistance to recent selling kept bears cautious. Bonds were somewhat mixed, with rails improving slowly.

The day's dividend news was largely unfavorable. In addition to the reduction by Southern Railway, directors of the Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville omitted payments on the common and preferred issues, a substantial majority of which is owned by Southern Railway and Louisville and Nashville. Real Silk Hosiery passed the preferred payment and withdrew the previously declared stock dividends on the common.

Woolworth extended its recent gains on the news that recapitalization of the English subsidiary was adding $78,000,000 to the parent company's surplus, bringing that item to more than $150,000,000. The addition is equal to $8 a share on the stock.

Today's meeting of the railroad executives was followed with interest, and there was a belief that definite agreement on the size of the freight increase to be requested would be reached. Decision in favor of a 15 per cent rise has seemed likely, since this would boost gross revenues about 10 per cent.

Reports that copper had been sold at 8 cents were discredited in some quarters, and the day's transactions were at 8¼ cents. Call money firmed in the outside market, where funds at 1 per cent again dried up and all offerings were at the Stock Exchange renewal rate, 1½ per cent.

Lists Closed Early On Woolworth Issue

LONDON, June 11.—The public response to the new issue of securities by F. W. Woolworth & Co., Ltd., was so great that the lists were closed today soon after the opening.

The issue was for 4,800,000 6 per cent cumulative preference £1 shares at par, and 2,250,000 ordinary five shilling shares.

NEW YORK, June 11.—F. W. Woolworth Co. will receive $27,000,000 in cash and new stock valued at about $77,000,000 as its share in the recapitalization of British Woolworth. A plan to distribute surplus to stockholders is to be decided on by directors.

General Motors Holders Decline

NEW YORK, June 11.—The total number of General Motors common and preferred stockholders for the second quarter of 1931 was 265,655 compared with 286,378 for the first quarter of 1931 and with 243,428 for the second quarter of 1930.

There were 268,400 holders of common stock and the balance of 17,255 represents holders of preferred stock. These figures compare with 268,907 common stockholders and 17,471 preferred for the first quarter of 1931.

Says Union Pacific Earnings Holding

NEW YORK, June 11.—Gross income of Union Pacific Company for May should be about 8 to 10 per cent below gross of May, 1930, according to Carl R. Gray, president. Net income for the month should make a better comparison with the same month of 1930 than did net income for April with April, 1930.

Youngstown Wage Payments Higher

YOUNGSTOWN, June 11.—Youngstown's payroll was higher in May than in any other month this year, according to records of the Youngstown Clearing House Association. Wage disbursements last month were $5,541,197, an advance of $21,288 above April.

National Transit Recalls Employes

National Transit Pump and Machine Company has recalled many of its employes to a full-time working schedule. Extra shifts will be employed in at least two divisions, following receipt of substantial orders.

Stock Membership Sells for $212,000

NEW YORK, June 11.—Arrangements have been made for the sale of a New York Stock Exchange membership at $212,000, an increase of $2,000 over the last previous transaction.

Department Store Sales Decrease

WASHINGTON, June 11.—Department store sales in May were 6 per cent less than April, according to the Federal Reserve Board.

Steel Earnings Expected To Show Decline

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

PROSPECTS FOR SECOND quarter earnings of steel companies are becoming even more clouded as a result of further declines in mill activity and the sharp reduction in the unfilled tonnage of the United States Steel Corporation.

At the beginning of the second quarter, it was generally thought that earnings of the major steel producers would be equal to or slightly greater than those of the first quarter. Recent developments, however, have led to the belief that results will be even less satisfactory than in the initial three month period of the year.

Prospects for increasing steel prices are becoming even dimmer than they were a short time ago. The continuous decline in operations has made the probability of the industry being a firm stand on quotations highly improbable. James Farrell's plea for higher prices was widely acclaimed as a sound recommendation but steel men are not likely to do anything about it.

Operations Decline

WHEN IT WAS PREDICTED that steel company earnings would not show further declines, the general expectation was that ingot production would not slump lower than 50 per cent of capacity. Output last week dropped from 42 per cent to 40 per cent and there are no indications of improvement during the summer months.

Unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation decreased 277,277 tons in May to a total of 3,620,452 tons at the end of the month. This drop was no larger than the slump in unfilled orders which usually takes place at this time of year but it is sufficiently great to indicate that the trend of activity in the steel business will be downward rather than upward during coming months.

Auto Output Off

REDUCED AUTOMOBILE PRODUCTION has been a major factor in the decline in steel mill activity. As automobile output has passed its spring peak, other types of consumption have failed to act as a compensating influence. A short time ago it was thought the building activity might act as a substantial stimulus to steel mill activity, but many of the new inquiries have failed to materialize into actual orders.

One of the steel trade publications intimated that the coal strike might be a factor in leading to a revival in the steel industry. It is difficult to see how coal labor conditions could have any marked effect on steel. Strikes are confined to only a few mines and consumers have had no difficulty in getting sufficient tonnage of coal to supply their current small requirements.

Earnings Prospects

PREDICTIONS ARE BEING made that the United States Steel Corporation will not earn its preferred dividend requirements in the second quarter. In the first quarter, these requirements were covered with a margin of 5 cents a share for the common stock.

Economies placed into effect may help some of the independent companies but it is extremely unlikely that statements will show any improvement over the first quarter.

RICHFIELD OIL PROBE LOOMS

LOS ANGELES, June 11.—(AP.)—The county grand jury may be asked to consider affairs of the Richfield Oil Company of California, and the Richfield Company, a holding concern, Bonner Richardson, deputy district attorney said after receiving a report of an operating deficit of $54,219,091.

The report, delivered to Richardson by R. L. Haight, state corporation commissioner, said a partial investigation showed the shortage due to alleged mismanagement and stock juggling.

Those named were C. M. Fuller, resigned president of the California concern; J. A. Talbot, chairman of the board, who yesterday filed bankruptcy proceedings in San Francisco; R. W. McKee, assistant to the chairman of the board, and A. M. Kelly, vice president.

Rarick Embarrassed While Addressing Guests

CHAPTER XXX.

The occasion marched to the address by Rarick, who, by the time the pistachio ice cream arrived, knew that this was to be one of the excessively nervous times he would be obliged to read his few remarks.

He did so after coffee, the decorous phrases, the mock humilities that had been written for him either by his secretary or by the wife of his secretary, dropped heavily on the assemblage.

"... share with you—proudest moment of my life—generous public—lifetime ambition—service of the people—humble servant—owe everything to generosity of those who have encouraged (applause)—temple of music dedicated to people (applause)—from the people back to the people—your generous co-operation my humble efforts—fine spirit of co-operation in my organization (applause)—thanks due to officials—employes (applause)—I wish I had the ability to express—dedicated to people—dedicated to people——"

JENNY IS UNEASY

"Awful! Awful! He said co-operation 11 times."

Ramon's knee so gently pressing hers. It made it easier, after the polite applause had died down, to look up from her plate.

Thank God, chairs were scraping back. Another horror of an occasion over. Curious, that the figure of Rarick could be so consistently a depressant. Never knew it to fail.

"You mustn't mind it, Jenny."

"I do mind, terribly. Why does he attempt it? Oh, Jennifer, there you are! Wasn't it ghastly?"

"No, dad's my idea of a bat in the pulpit, or is it belfry? I love the bat, if only I didn't have such a horror of getting him caught in my hair. Gratton, you're supposed to be a word-prestidigitor. Pull me a phrase out of the blue that can do justice to that view down there."

They leaned over the parapet, young and exultant, stricken with the wonder of what they were, even more than with the wonder of what they beheld.

The wind in their faces could not budge her in the tight black helmet that covered her head like close hair. It lifted the light tan thatch of Gratton's though, as if it were a wig. It was difficult to indulge in any but a breathless sort of discourse and yet, they did discourse, these two smartly at first, young, exultant, and high-keyed each to the other's presence.

"After spending a summer in a picturesque, damp, uncomfortable and gloomy thatched cottage in Sussex I am convinced that love in a cottage may lead to lumbago."

"Love! Must all conversational roads lead to love?"

"Your way, I suppose, of asking how, or if, I have recovered from my last devastating love-affair?"

"Many a true word . . ."

EVADING CREDITORS

"Many and many a true word . . ." she said, fastening her hard, hurt eyes upon him. "Well, to whom it may concern, the dead past has buried its Berry. I'm so unattached it hurts! I think I'm in love now with the idea of being in love with you, Gratton."

"I wish you could manage to get all the way through to being in love with me, Jennifer. I need to be rich. I've a low kind of Indiana background that I don't seem able to live down. I can't feel the swank in evading my creditors. An unpaid dry cleaner's bill will insist upon keeping me too worried to tackle a second act."

"I know it! But hang it all, my highest creative impulses, whatever that means, get all obscured by fear that the dry-cleaner's thirteenth child may be dying of rickets, for need of pure, fresh milk. Of course, dry-cleaner can probably buy and sell me 10 times over, but that doesn't seem to lessen my obligation."

"Go on."

"Where?"

"Not being all the wise-crack things we seem to pretend to be, whenever we are together."

"It's you who sets that pace, Jennifer."

"Too loaded with the seductiveness of youth and beauty."

"Don't rag. I am being profound and introspective. Altitude does that to me. My face aches, Gratton, from pretending to look like what it isn't."

"Perhaps it is your heart that aches, Jennifer."

"That's it! The ache is down there, and my face hurts from pretending that it isn't."

"Not kind, Jennifer."

"If I were to start in allowing myself to be kind to you, Gratton, I might not know where to stop."

"Wonderful of you to say that."

PRAIRIE OF DIMES

"It's nice, our being this way," he said, on a blurt of words.

"Where?"

"No, darling, we're not docking this season on top of the Woolworth Building. Look to the left. See, there's the Aquitania, beyond her are two ferries passing one another, and just beyond them there's a steamer sliding alongside her pier."

"Yes! Two red funnels."

"Right. I want a port, Gratton. I want to slip alongside a pier. That's what Father always says about you. You've destination."

"What kind of port do you want, Jennifer?"

"Are you thinking, or saying, that?"

"Both?"

"Aren't I grotesque to you, Gratton, up here on this peak of dimes? Don't I appall you?"

"In a way, yes."

"Look at father over there. Bewildered, frustrated, with dimes. Sometimes he seems to me like a little man whose eyes have turned to dimes and whose spirit cannot shine through them. Dimes have flowed over his life, making of it a metal prairie. My mother stands in the middle of such prairie. I do. My brother lies buried in it. This building is a monument of dimes to the futility of dimes . . . and, in a way, a monument to the curious, groping genius of my father. I am part of his great frustration Gratton—never for a moment doubt but what I know that."

He laid his gloved hand against his mouth.

"There are times when I come perilously near liking you perilously, Jennifer."

RARICK OPPRESSED

"Then you understand him," he said, and nodded to the form of Rarick, who seemed perpetually to be hovering on the edge of groups to which he did not quite belong.

"I try," she said, on a small click of teeth. "I try, I try. I try. Believe that."

"Curious how simple he seems to me. A man who is too stern an idealist to compromise. A man who asked for bread and got a gold nugget."

"I don't."

"I'm crazy to help him. I'm crazy to—love him."

"I should think his pathos would help you to that; the pathos of his terrible, heart-breaking grandeur."

"It does."

"Jennifer, you are sweeter today than I have ever known you. Please don't ever again let your face ache from looking like what it isn't."

"Yes, but what about my heart?"

"It's a dear heart. In the right place."

"Gratton, if you prove that to father, some day, when I do things for him that he won't believe I had it in me to do, will I be proving it to you at the same time?"

"If you haven't already."

"I need more money than anybody in the world, Gratton. The chances are that I'm apt to always have money.

"I wouldn't want ever not to have money, and yet, I suppose that the only real chance I'd ever have to know what I think I'm made of, is to wake up some morning broke—God forbid!"

"I'm beginning to strangely suspect you of being made of what you think you are."

"Don't make this strong man weep, Gratt. She might proceed to tell you how ghastly lone-some and misunderstood she is. Than which . . . ."

"Don't take advantage of my youthful susceptibility. I am on the verge of thinking you more of a person than is good for my peace of mind."

". . . . and so, snapping out of the mood of better-self which had crossed her fair and petulant face, the feted and ill-fated heiress to the Rarick millions hurled her champagne tumbler from her hand and—ate the glass . . . ."

"Idjut!"

He stooped to pick up her glove which had fallen crumpled to her feet.

"Give me your hand," he said. "I'll draw this on for you."

"Are you suing for my hand?"

"No."

"Idjut," he said again.

This was the conversation between those two, as they stood at the parapet, overlooking the world, high wind in their faces, and their words perked off their lips and swallowed up by gusts. Once or twice Rarick hovered. The very atmosphere about them was built up of the kind of particles that kept him gingerly on edge. Their sureness and brightness and youngness oppressed him with a sense of his own unsureness. He felt ill at ease.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Photograph Saves Burglar From Being Arrested

The Thief

"Slim" sauntered down Aston avenue with the air of one accustomed to the vicinity and merely out for a constitutional.

Slim's keen eyes didn't miss a trick. House after house he sized up as he sauntered along.

Most of the houses in this section of Ashton avenue gave evidence that the occupants were far from financial worries. Slim's quick study of them was, for the most part, as to their possibilities for easy entrance.

There was something of a newness to Ashton avenue. Slim couldn't place it exactly like this. It had been devoted to old-fashioned and wide-apart homes when he had been there as a boy. He had been in the city within recent years, to be sure, but not out in the residential district.

When Slim's father died his mother had moved away and then married again. Her second husband had been rather impossible; wealthy enough, but an old bachelor before he married Slim's mother; very religious and set in his ways.

Slim wasn't thinking of him or of his mother, who had moved away. He was thinkng of the business before him. He had to make a quick haul. He was out of funds, or nearly so. He wanted to get back to the big city. He had been gone long enough now so that it would be safe to blow back there and get busy with his old crowd.

After a while Slim crossed the street and started back. He always sized up the houses on the side of the street opposite to him. He got a better view.

Slim stopped and pretended to tie his shoe. Then he produced his case and got a cigaret and lighted it.

INVESTIGATES HOME

By this time his keen brain had absorbed an accurate picture of the place. It was made of rough granite and the west side was green with a thick tapestry of stout ivy. Just the sort of a place to work.

Slim placed the house in his mind, crossed the street, glimpsed the number, and sauntered on.

He went down to the business section to his cheap hotel, had something to eat and went to his room "to tear off some sleep," as he expressed it to himself. He needed sleep, for he would be up and about around 10 and 11 that night and then he would be making a break away from there, for whatever he managed to grab off in this place he would have to take away. He couldn't exchange it for cash there. He had to travel on to a certain clever and safe fence he knew in Philly. Then he could beat it on to the "Big Apple."

Shortly after 10 he reached the granite house on Ashton avenue and slipped between the granite posts at the front walk. Well-grown and costly shrubbery was a great help to him. He could dodge around and get a look at the whole house.

Forcing heavy doors was too long and too noisy a job. Windows were easier. Back on the west side of the house, which was in black shadow, Slim tested the ancient ivy vine. It was like a steel cable. He went up deftly and swung to a narrow window balcony.

Slim raised the window cautiously. It was a well-made window and went up without rattle or squeak. He stepped inside. His first job was to make sure no one was at home. Then he went down, unfastened the rear door, left it slightly ajar and went back up stairs.

OFFICER SEES FLASH

The first large sleeping room he tackled looked quite like a master's bedroom, but evidently it was a guest room. Slim had gained plenty of experience in such matters.

Night Patrolman Sylvester Manley was standing under a big elm over in the adjoining grounds enjoying a cigaret smoke, as it was forbidden while on duty. A little flash inside the granite mansion caught his eye. It came through the spare room window—then a second quick flash.

There it was!

Now his next move was to find out if it was a solo job. He could see no signs of any outposts or watchers. Probably, he thought, the owner was at the Ferndale Club ball. All the swells who were members of that exclusive club were out there.

Inside Slim was moving down the upper hall to the next room, using enough light to see the rugs and step on them. He opened a door.

This was a handsome room, beautifully decorated, and Slim grinned. This would be a boudoir. Leading from it would be the woman's room, the lady of the house. Her jewels would be in there.

Patrolman Manley was coming up the stairs. He thought there was another step and his foot came down hard, with that annoying jolt that is the climax to this sort of a mistake.

Slim heard it!

He flashed his light around the walls. He was searching for the light switches. There was one beside the mantel over the fireplace.

PATROLMAN ENTERS

He stepped to the fireplace, switched the lights on full, tossed his flashlight and flat steel and iron into the fireplace behind the little tapestry screen and leaned his elbow on the mantel.

"Reach!" he said, waggling his automatic.

"For Pete's sake, what's eating you, Big Boy?" Slim drawled.

Patrolman Manley blinked a little. The chap before him was young. He was well dressed, clean shaven and quite at ease as he stood there smoking his cigaret.

"What's this, a second-story worker disguised as a cop? If it is, you win. I'm only a guest here, but even a guest doesn't care to be drilled."

"Guest, eh?"

Patrolman Manley stopped short and stared at something on the ornate mantel piece. He stared so hard and such a queer, shame-faced expression came over his countenance that Slim turned to see what he was staring at.

It was a handsomely framed photograph of Slim, himself.

ESCAPES WITH LOOT

"At any rate, you can't say I don't keep a good watch of people's homes around here, sir," Manley said. "How is it you are not out to that Ferndale Club dance with the Widder Copeland?"

"Fed up on dances," Slim answered, but he was gripping the edge of the mantel.

"Well, I'll be going—sorry—but it was all in the line of duty."

"Of course — many thanks. What's the name, officer? I'll tell Hattie about this and she'll probably reward you or at least speak a good word for you at headquarters."

Patrolman Manley went out.

Slim began to look about the room—yes, there it was, the portrait in oils of his mother with a 5-year-old boy beside her. The angelic little boy was Slim.

"Jees!" he whispered.

He waited a while, then sneaked out.

Two houses below Slim made a very satisfactory haul and by daybreak he and his suitcase were in the caboose of a freight, headed east. Slim was letting the conductor and brakeman trim him a few dollars at penny ante cheaper and safer than traveling by passenger train and paying fare.

Men Who Make America What It Is Today

This is Mortimore McSmokestack, industrialist, who is making heroic efforts to promote friendly relations with the working classes. During the last six months he has abolished discontent among six stenographers by presenting them with platinum slave bracelets. He has also arranged to feed and clothe several undernourished manicurists.

Another Coal Inquiry

In response to the request of the National Miners' Union that he withdraw state police from the coal strike area, Gov. Pinchot announces his determination to get the facts concerning conditions.

The administration, he says, has set its face like flint against violence from either side in the struggle, but recognizes that the working and living conditions of the miners are matters of the deepest concern to the government and the people.

He might have added that the plight of the operators, confronted with the necessity of selling coal below the cost of production if they wish to avoid closing their mines, is also a matter of deepest concern.

The Governor's course is to be applauded. At the same time, however, there can be little enthusiasm for an investigation unless some assurance can be had that it will be followed by action.

There is little need for another fact-finding enterprise. The facts have been found again and again, and are well known.

The Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce filled a dozen fat books with the facts as adduced by its investigation of the soft coal strike of 1928. Only within the last few weeks the Russell Sage Foundation reported the facts, as ascertained by its investigation of thousands of disputes between operators and miners in the Central Competitive Field of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

The essential facts are that coal production exceeds consumption, that the wage stream cannot rise higher than its source, that cut-throat competition is the order of the day, and that Western Pennsylvania operators will be unable to do much to improve conditions until their Southern West Virginia competitors are willing to go along.

Mr. McGregor, of the Carnegie Coal Company, was quoted the other day as telling a delegation of strikers who demanded recognition of their union that it would be out of the question for local operators to enter into wage contracts with miners' organizations until the Southern fields were unionized.

No doubt there are many Western Pennsylvania operators who would be glad to enter into a wage agreement if they could have assurance that all their competitors would pay the same wage.

Shaler Township People Join Movement to Improve Education in Rural Districts.

Inquiries made by the Sun-Telegraph several weeks ago elicited the information that while little fault was to be found with the educational facilities provided for the children of Pittsburgh there was considerable room for improvement in some of the rural districts of Allegheny County.

School buildings were found which were wholly inadequate. Many country children, the investigation disclosed, were being deprived of their educational rights.

Steps have since been taken in a number of districts to correct unsatisfactory conditions. The latest to join the march for improvement is Shaler Township, where the people voted Tuesday in favor of a $250,000 bond issue for a new junior-senior high school with full academic courses as well as a complete commercial course and classes in industrial arts.

The township is to be congratulated on this step forward.

Sunday Movies Promised

Council appropriated $10,000 for the purpose, but when it came to ordering films it was discovered that the only first-class ones available were talkies, which would cost a larger sum.

Mayor Kline apparently has found a way of getting around the expense difficulty. At any rate the promise is made that there will be Sunday talkies in Schenley, Highland, East and McKinley Parks, beginning about the middle of July.

The free Sunday entertainment in the parks in summer is one of the best things that the Kline administration has introduced, and it is gratifying that it is to be continued.

Get Acquainted With It

Now That Voting Machine Has Been Sent, It Is Up to the Voters to Learn How to Use It.

The Poole Engineering and Machine Company, of Baltimore, which received a contract to furnish 1,100 voting machines to Allegheny County, has at last sent one for demonstration purposes. It is to be placed on exhibition in the county commissioners' office.

It is desirable that citizens shall become acquainted with the operation of the machine in advance of the election, that they may use it confidently and quickly when the time comes for voting.

Unscrupulous politicians who are opposed to the introduction of the voting machine would probably be pleased if delays and difficulties would attend its initial use in the September primary. They would be only too glad of an excuse for proposing that the paper ballot, which lends itself more readily to cheating, be restored.

The Poole Company has promised to have all the machines here by August 15. That will give plenty of opportunity for everyone to get acquainted with the workings of the device.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Why Not Marry?

"Marriage," says the Hard-Boiled, "has not only ceased to be woman's Highest Career. It is not a 'career,' at all; but just an incident or an accident—and usually a mistake!"

* * *

Nonsense and tommyrot! The first essential to a man's happiness—and above all, to a woman's—is a LIFE-COMPANION! And no job, no profession, no mission, no art—not even a pair of prize Pekingese will take the place of a husband!

In the name of honesty, let us admit it! A husband is exactly what he always has been and always will be—the permanent necessity of a woman's life. The primary working-foundation for happiness and self-development—the sine qua non of success! The theme, the title-page and the climax of her life-story!

* * *

Even when a girl does not plan to begin her "career" by annexing a husband, she subconsciously plans to END that way. Even though a man may struggle against marriage to the last ditch, he is somehow glad and relieved when the struggle is over and he feels the anaesthetic of domesticity creeping over him.

* * *

A woman MUST have something human to cling to, worry about, brag about, idealize and manage—something to mother, yearn over, appeal to and command. Somebody human to OWN!

A lover is merely a luxury; a husband is a necessity—useful in as many ways as the latest electrical device and far more decorative. Even with a tombstone over him, he affords you a sort of social prestige and self-complacency that a spinster is denied.

* * *

What if he does require the sacrifice of a few laurels, illusions, comforts, pet habits, closet-hooks and ideas on "individualism?" Isn't he worth the price?

* * *

As for a man without a woman to chide him and believe in him, he is like a motor-car without a safety-clutch, a barge without a tugboat, a watch without a regulator. Marriage puts a man's feet on the earth and his nose to the grindstone—and turns him from a drone or a butterfly into a Solid Citizen!

* * *

Most of the illustrous names that have come down to us through history have been those of distinguished husbands. What did Adam ever do—except fill the role of husband to Eve? What is the first thing you think of when you hear the name of Solomon? Wisdom? Glory? The Proverbs? No, verily—seven hundred wives!

* * *

Be as snappily cynical about marriage as you will. It may be a bore, a joy or a joke—but it is still the Alpha and Omega of existence. And, without it all else is dead sea fruit!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, May 11.—A touch of Picadilly has come to upper Madison avenue. Doubtless most visitors to London have lingered haltingly at the appetizing windows of Fortnum and Mason at Picadilly and Duke street. Their quaint advertisements dating back from 1710 are eagerly sought by collectors.

The Madison avenue branch shop, not as rich and varied as the original, is, however, suffocatingly British. And so as in London it whets the palates of gourmets. Pepys, Pitt, Thackeray, Thomas Burke and Carlyle penned pithy panegyrics to Fortnum and Mason.

Gladstone and Disraeli shopped there and the present royal family are occasional patrons. From the establishment Queen Victoria ordered 250 pounds of beef tea sent to Florence Nightingale on the Crimean front. Far back in the mildewed years Mason was a kitchen maid and Fortnum a Queen Anne servant.

In the London shop one finds such British edibles as marmalades, chutney, puddings, grouse, kippers and smoked salmon. Along with such surprises as kangaroo tail soup, coxcombs in jelly, shark fin soup, grouse pie, bright cheese known as Wensleydale and a penumbra of darkly smoked meats.

Sentimentalists will wish the American version a cheerio. Its heavy and fruity fare offers a spice to an age of light vegetarianism. Still names and institutions hallowed by the red rust of time have little appeal for hurrying New Yorkers. They live in the eternal now.

Restaurants have long since found that to advertise a place as where Gen. Grant or even the later O. Henry dined has no drawing power. But show that Lindbergh, Helen Morgan or Mayor Walker are patrons and the tables may fill in jig time.

* * *

On the Bowery the shave has slumped from 15 cents to a dime and a hair cut from a quarter to 20 cents. One shop in Chatham Square is featuring a 10-cent manicure. But the frozen pride of the avenue salons has not melted. One place still charges $3 a manicure.

Among the Harlem slumming spots is The Clam Shop—an airless haven where a masculinely dressed mulatto woman sings ribald songs to her own piano accompaniment. It is at its merriest around 4 a. m. But to me it was as foggy with melancholy as with smoke. Members of our party saw a white girl toss a note to a black fellow as she danced past and saw him bestow a sly, answering wink. And what heightened the shudder was that one of our party knew the girl.

* * *

On the way home we fell to discussing the greatest sudden surprises ever received. My own concerned a worshipped repertoire actress upon whom I came flagrante delicto in a moon-lit dell returning from a possum hunt. But I think the most hair-raising of all was that of a gentleman who awakened in the middle of the night at a house party to see the wife of his best friend go through his trousers pockets and extract the bill fold. Then tip toe back to her husband.

The late Will Hogg and I were prowling around the lower East Side Ghetto one Sunday morning as a prelude to a kosher breakfast in one of the Delancey street delicatessens. He stopped to purchase a scoopful of parboiled sunflower seeds—a salted delicacy of the section, and spread them out on a table while waiting our order. Among them was a folded piece of paper which he started to throw away, then opened it up. Printed across it was "Hello Will—How's everything in Houston?" That was his home city. It was doubtless the leger-demain of some practical joker, but I spent the rest of the day nursing a fully developed set of the ork-orks. He always thought it a prank of mine. It wasn't.

One of the eerie stories persisting since the Dorothy Arnold disappearance concerns a new and strange white swan in the Central Park Lake a few feet from the spot on the shore where the Arnold girl was last seen. The swan was not there until the morning following her disappearance. The inference is that she suddenly turned, of all the sillies, into a swan.

FATHER OF CHEMISTRY

By Archibald Henderson

A really notable figure in the history of science is Robert Boyle. He is universally known, of course, because of his formulation of the famous law of gases, known as Boyle's law. But this single discovery, for which he is principally known, is in no sense a measure of his eminence as a scientist. Indeed, he has been called the father of chemistry and the first true exponent of the Baconian method. He is remembered, also, as the coiner of the expressive phrase, "Chemical analysis." He did much, personally, to forward that branch of the new science of which he was godfather.

Robert Boyle, seventh son of Richard Boyle, Earl of Cork, was born at Lismore in Ulster, Ireland, on January 25, 1627. After a somewhat ineffective early training he was sent with his brother to study at Eton. He soon exhibited traits of a high order of scholarship. After leaving Eton, he studied for several years under a private tutor. He was very devout, and made a deep study of the Scriptures. His mind was greatly enriched and strengthened by a foreign tour, during which he studied for a short time at the University of Leyden, and later visited France and Switzerland, settling for a time at Geneva.

Upon his return home in 1644 he devoted himself to the management of his estates, and also to scientific and philosophic pursuits. He organized a philosophical society or "invisible college," as the members called themselves. The membership of this society included some of the most eminent scientific and philosophic figures of the day. For a time they met in London; but after 1654, when Boyle settled in Oxford, they met both at Oxford and in London. After the return to power of Charles II, a dilettante student of science, the "invisible college" was incorporated by royal charter into the famous Royal Society. Boyle refused all honors, including a peerage, the office of provost of Eton, and the presidency of the Royal Society. He preferred to devote his life exclusively to scientific research and religious study and meditation. His writings show a delightful vein of benignant satire, and his portrait reveals a beautiful, refined and sensitive face.

Boyle made many experiments of importance regarding the pressure of the atmosphere. He had for assistance the skilled technician and excellent scientist, Robert Hooke. Many of his experiments seem very elementary to modern students of physics; and the apparatus he employed lacked the extreme refinement of modern invention. But this simplicity, the accuracy of the observations, and the care with which the experiments were conducted furnished the very object lessons then so imperatively needed for enforcing the necessity of painstaking investigation and accurate measurement.

In England, the fundamental law which Boyle discovered is universally known as Boyle's Law. Not so in France, where it is called Mariotte's Law, after the French scientist who discovered it independently, 14 years after Boyle's famous and fully recorded experiment. Mariotte discovered, as he put it, the law "that air condenses in proportion to the weight by which it is loaded." It is a singular fact that Mariotte was ignorant of Boyle's experiment; yet such was undoubtedly the case.

Boyle made many scientific experiments, which showed the range of his mind and the extent of his investigations. He demonstrated, for example, that heat is a mode of motion, although his apparatus was imperfect. He specifically states, as the result of his experiments, that heat is motion, namely of the small particles which constitute bodies. He also showed that magnetic forces can act through a vacuum and demonstrated the same regarding electrical attraction.

Boyle was a man of deep religious instincts and of profound piety. He was for a time president of the charitable organization which eventually developed into the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. Boyle died on December 30, 1691.

As the bright waves that flow
Are all like the links in a chain,
So each message your lips may deliver
Will be part of life's pleasure or pain.

And none with the vision are dowered
To look down the vista of years
And to see how light words will have flowered
Into fruitage of smiles or of tears.

Not just for today or tomorrow
The problem this hour may bear;
All the years yet to face you may borrow
From your answer their rapture or care.

So, whatever the questions that greet you,
Weigh fully the answer you give,
For someday, that answer may meet you,
As your words, long-forgotten, will live!

Text For Today

The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance.—II. Peter, iii:9.

(The text for today is suggested by the Rev. J. W. Hawley, pastor, First Methodist Protestant Church, East End.)

Prosperity Loan Would Stop Waste of Manpower

THE time element is of supreme importance in fixing the total social cost of the business depression.

Any sound program for quickening trade recovery will therefore mean the saving of billions of dollars of productive energy, which otherwise would be wasted.

Apart from humane considerations, there is irreparable economic waste in the failure to put 6,000,000 unemployed human beings to productive work.

Labor is perishable, and the loss of productive power, which is inherent in widespread unemployment, will never be recouped.

SIMILARLY, the idleness of America's iron slaves—the great machines which modern industry has built to carry on the heavy work of the world—likewise entails huge economic wastage.

William Randolph Hearst's proposal for a $5,000,000,000 federal prosperity loan means not only the bringing back of prosperity, but also the restoration of economic well-being much sooner than the present negative policy of aimless drifting.

Any mind that can grasp the economy of the country as a whole is shocked at the sheer waste of keeping willing workers idle while important public projects need to be carried forward.

TO wait until private industry booms before starting public works on a large scale, including the development of internal waterways and public power sites, would entail great folly.

Such delay would result in a competition between government and industry for men and materials, and would create inflationary excesses, which would soon lead to another severe economic crisis.

Virtually all scientific economists clearly recognize these facts, but the administration at Washington fails to take positive steps on a sufficiently broad scale.

MR. HEARST'S proposal is entirely practicable.

The expressed preference of timid investors at this time for bonds of the highest grade makes government financing far more feasible at this stage than private corporate financing.

The trend of the times was clearly demonstrated in the recent oversubscription seven and a half times of the new 18-year 3⅛ per cent United States Treasury bonds.

As a matter of fact, it may be impossible after this depression for the Treasury to raise capital as cheaply again for a generation.

The public spending program will tend to lift general business from the dead level of depression.

Where private initiative has fallen down in offering employment, the government will temporarily step in to fill the breach.

The turning of the unemployed to productive work will diffuse vast quantities of dynamic purchasing power among the consuming public, which will again begin to replenish its supplies of general merchandise.

Thus the effects of the prosperity loan will seep through general industry and trade, and restore the economic balance, on which good times depend.

After general business returns to normal, the government might well slacken its public works program, and hold unspent funds as a stabilization reserve to be used in the next recession.

Mr. Hearst's proposed remedy for depression is timely. It can be applied more safely now after the mistakes and excesses of the previous boom have been corrected, than it could have been before.

The responsibility lies with President Hoover to bring this plan quickly before the attention of Congress, which should pass the necessary enabling legislation without delay.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

You'll be feeling fine. Then suddenly, for no good reason, everything will go blah. You feel dead inside—as though all sensation had stopped forever. Or blue—choked with some mysterious sorrow which you can't define.

You tell yourself it's absurd to feel like this. You say you ought to be ashamed . . . things might be a thousand times worse . . . look at the troubles some people have. You count your blessings. But it doesn't do any good. You're still wretched. Why? You don't know why. That's the worst of it.

You can know why they happen. THEY HAPPEN BECAUSE YOU ARE A HUMAN BEING AND NOT A COW OR A CATFISH.

Have you ever thought what it means to be a Human Being—what it has cost to produce Human Life? Probably not. Most of us take our condition for granted. We assume we "just happened." We didn't. Human Life is the result of the longest, hardest, costliest experiment that Creation has ever made.

All life is mysterious enough. Even the life of a tree, a worm, a gnat, is infinitely complicated. Countless generations of living cells had to grope and fumble and battle and breed and die before one gnat grew wings.

THEN CONSIDER THE MILLIONS UPON MILLIONS OF LOWER ORGANISMS WHICH HAD TO PASS THROUGH LIFE BEFORE A MAN COULD THINK AND FEEL.

Why do you have moods? That's why. You have moods because you are more than brute flesh . . more than an arrangement of bone and meat which eats and sleeps and reproduces its kind and dies. You have a thinking brain . . . a feeling, emotional system. But you have these things AT A PRICE. If you are intelligent enough to think, you are bound to think of irritating as well as inspiring things.

MOODS ARE THE PRICE YOU PAY FOR HAVING A HUMAN BRAIN AND HEART.

It's a great gift to have Human Life .... BUT IT'S ALSO A GREAT CHALLENGE. Billions of lives came and went before one form of life arrived which was fit to house the brain and heart of a Man .... WHICH WAS FIT TO STAND THE STRAIN OF THOUGHT AND FEELING. And many who now wear human form are not standing that strain. They may speak human language, use human gestures, but when it comes to thinking and feeling they have little on any cow.

And, indeed, we all rebel at times against the heavy job of Being Human. That is what happens when you "get sick of everything."

Human Life is the greatest gift on earth, but it is also the greatest challenge. Can you accept that challenge? Have you gumption enough to stand the strain of "moods?"

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Your friend has refused to lend you money and you are disappointed.

Or perhaps your disappointment is based more on the fact that he wants security of equal value if he loans you the money, and he is your friend.

You believe that he should not ask the same guarantee of payment of the loan what would be asked of a stranger.

Of course you intend to repay him.

Many men have been financially ruined in backing friends who were as honest as you think that you are.

Death may come to entangle your finances.

Merit Badges Distributed Members of East Borough Troops in Competition

More than 250 Girl Scouts from a dozen troops in the East boroughs assembled at Koenig Field last Saturday for their annual "Play Day." Edgewood, Wilkinsburg, Swissvale, Braddock, Forest Hills, Penn and Versailles townships and Turtle Creek were represented.

Registration and team-meeting were followed by an assembly at colors and flags. From 5:30 to 5:30 the girls played at scout games, including knot-tying, nature study, first-aid, compass, signaling and laws. The games were "play for play's sake," leaders said, rather than competition among troops for prizes.

At 5:30 the troops recited and sang. Announcements of winners in the games was made. An out-door picnic supper was followed by a court of awards. Merit badges were distributed. At 7 p. m., the Wilkinsburg Baptist Church troop, under the direction of Mrs. Freeman, captain, presented a Scout play, "A Loyal Girl Scout," a Foreign Country with a cast of 10 girls.

Sprinter Beats Pony In 40-Yard Race

DEL MONTE, Cal.—(INS.)—Pete Gerhardt, San Francisco sprinter, was in his prime back at the 1912 Olympic games, but he still can beat a pony for forty yards. He won by two feet over a four-legged competitor recently, although the starter was his unintentional ally by firing the pistol too close to the pony, causing him to prance a bit.

Plan Concert With Old Instruments

DRESDEN, Germany.—(INS.)—October and the following months will bring a series of concerts here, lasting through the winter, in which valuable old instruments will be used and historic music given in its original form and setting.

German Police Curb Street Orators

MANNHEIM, Germany.—(INS.)—The police here have hit on an original method of dealing with street orators who cause crowds to collect and obstruct traffic. Wherever such a group forms, a police truck full of chairs appears, the speaker is politely invited to take one. In every instance the effect has been the same: general laughter by the hearers and the abashed disappearance of the orator.

NEW SCHUBERT MUSIC FOUND

The score is handwritten and a "clean copy" prepared by Schubert himself and dedicated to Princess Karoline Esterhazy. It is a composition of German dances, and in point of artistic value absolutely unequalled.

The title of the manuscript, which is in a perfect condition, is simply "Deutsche," i.e. German. The first page bears Franz Schubert's signature, and the date 1824.

The authenticity of the find has been established beyond doubt. Several music institutes as well as many collectors had already offered large sums for the manuscript, which will probably be put up to auction by its present proprietors.

Hollywood Expects 300,000 at Concerts

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—(INS.)—Attendance of at least 300,000 persons, many of them from middle-western and eastern states, is expected during this summer's "Symphonies Under the Stars" in Hollywood Bowl, according to Glenn M. Tindall, Bowl manager. Tindall bases his estimate on the large number of season ticket books and boxes already sold and the demand for seat reservations. Last summer, when a record up to that time was set, the attendance was a little over 240,000.

Auto Thief's Broken Arm Gets Him Free

DEL NORTE, Col.—(INS.)—Wilbur Crowley, arrested here in an automobile stolen at Monte Vista, Col., told police he had fractured his arm last November in an automobile accident in Florida. Penniless, Crowley was unable to obtain aid.

"I'll plead guilty, or do anything to get where somebody will fix my arm."

Local authorities, instead of prosecuting, arranged for Crowley to receive medical aid.

Mountain Peak Given Discoverer's Name

LOS ANGELES.—(INS.)—A mountain peak, 13,601 feet high, near here has been named in memory of the late Professor Alfred Prater who discovered and chartered it in 1928. He was before his death, a member of the faculty of the University of California at Los Angeles. Prater Peak is located in the Inyo National Forest, and was so named by the United States Geographic board.

DENVER.—(INS.)—Jack Nolan, 35, English journalist, and his bicycle "Angela" passed through Denver recently en route to Mexico City and Yucatan from Canada. Nolan expects to gather material for a magazine article while on this trip and incidentally, to rediscover an old Spanish mine in the interior of Mexico for which he has a map. Nolan expects to cover more than 7,000 miles on the bicycle before reaching his destination in Mexico.

German Dancer Teaches English

PARIS.—(INS.)—More letters from America were received at the principal French ports during the year of 1556 than 1929. French mails to America were also much heavier. At Cherbourg there was an increase of over 4,000 sacks received for dispatch and at Le Havre nearly 7,000 more than had been received in 1929.

OBSERVE PLAY'S ANNIVERSARY

ROTHENBURG, Germany.—(INS.)—This year's performances of this old city's historical festival play, "The Master Drink," will have special significance, since the event which it commemorates—the taking of the city by Tilly during the Thirty Years War—happened 300 years ago.

This summer also brings the Fiftieth anniversary of the play itself and of the historical "Sheperds' Dance" performed in connection with it.

Rothenburg, which was on the side of the Protestants, was taken by the imperial troops in 1631 after a siege and bombardment, and Tilly ordered that it be plundered and that the city councilmen be beheaded by their own executioner.

Moved by the pleas of the doomed men's wives and by a few draughts of good wine, he promised to spare the city and its rulers if one of these could empty at one draught a huge bumper of wine. Burgomaster Nush succeeded in doing so. Tilly kept his word, but required the payment of 6,000 guilders for the shells fired into the city by his artillery.

With one forepaw he tried to reach under the boards to get hold of the pike, but by mistake he put his foot into its open mouth. With a lightning snap the jaws locked and the fox was trapped.

Yale May Construct Town High School

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—(INS.)—Possibilities of the erection of a high school plant at Church and Grove streets, in the heart of the city, seemed in prospect when announcement was made that Yale University has purchased the old homesteads of Col. Theodore D. Woolsey and Elford Trowbridge, for unknown purposes. New Haven has at present two high schools directly between the new Payne Whitney gymnasium and the Sterling Graduate school, both under construction along Tower parkway, and it is believed that the University may erect a high school in exchange for the present school properties.

PARIS.—(INS.)—American generosity is once more making French children happy. Two more units of the American Playground system have just been opened in the capital. They are the gifts of Mrs. Elsie Stern, prominent member of the American Colony here. They have been named "Strasbourg," after the birthplace of Mrs. Stern's father, and "Florence Blumenthal" after her sister.

Snatching the purse from the would-be robber, Miss Cowell started after the bandit and chased him seven blocks before he disappeared, she told police.

OLD LOG CABIN REMODELED FOR HOME

Frankstown Road Landmark, Built in 1819, Purchased; Ancient Features Retained

One of Pittsburgh's old landmarks, a log cabin built on Frankstown road in 1819 by Henry Morrow, an early settler, has been remodeled and bought by William J. Bair, a Pittsburgher.

The old Morrow homestead originally included the site. The cabin consisted of two rooms and a low-ceilinged attic. It is reported to have served as the post office for White Ash Postoffice for Penn Township when Penn and Wilkins and part of Plum Township. The postoffice was moved to Sandy Creek in 1875.

The cabin remained in the Morrow family until 1917, when it was sold to Frankstown Estates to Robert S. Maytum of Williamsport, who was building the cabin. The Morrow children and sons and daughters prospered from crops found beneath their property and from the rich soil on their farm.

Descendants of early settlers say that Frankstown road was cut through a wilderness from Hollidaysburg to Pittsburgh by Gen. Forbes about 1758, after Braddock's defeat. It was said he cut the trail during the French and Indian wars in order to recapture the territory lost by the English.

Mr. Bair, the purchaser of the Morrow cabin, will live there with his wife, his married daughter and grandson. An effort has been made to retain as fast as possible the original aspects of the cabin. Only the necessary repairs were made. An open chimney fireplace, six feet wide inside and eight feet wide outside, is a feature of the house.
